Re Sald That When Going Over the Bars With Christie They Stombled, and in the Confusion the Revolver Was Discharged-Could Not Tell How it Happened, But He Did Not Mean to Kill the Girl Whom He Loved Better Than Life, Etc.

PLYMOUTH, N. H., Nov. 10.-This morning the addresses of the counsel for Almy and for the State are being made. They are expected to be brief, and then Judge Doe will announce the degree of murder and sentence the prisoner

Yesterday Almy was put on the stand, and his evidence was breathlessly followed by the tremendous crowd present. He said he loved Christie with all his heart, and thought that if he conditions had her she would have led him to a betser life. They talked it over, and she advised him to get a better educa-tion, but lack of funds compelled him to reach to the conclusion to make a short cut to professional life.

Witness said that Christie kissed him when they parted. She aroused pas-sions in his breast, and had Mrs. War-den spoken only one pleasant word to him he would not have been here to day. He then gave an account nere to day. He then gave an account of his travels after leaving Hanover, saying that he bought his revolver in Springfield, for the purpose of taking it with him to Texas. He had shown it to several persons, and had made no attempt to conceal it.

tempt to conceal it.

He finally came to Hanover for the purpose of seeing Christic alone, to get her approval and encouragement. He did not write whilehe was away, because he was afraid she would not get the letters. His expectations were high, and as he had no doubt her parents were against him, he must see Christic alone. He arrived in Hanover on the miduleht train and went into the Warmidnight train, and went into the War-den barn, from which he could command a view of the kitchen and parlor. He thought he could see her when she went to the Grange.

About a week later he went through the bouse one night. He went four times in all. The last time he decided open her door and speak to her. He d St, but her brother was lying on the ed. He go, not stay all the time in the barn, but wants ed about the fields, waiting nearly a mouth to see Christie. He told of entering the room at Mr. Pettee's, occupied by Christie, but was horrified to find it occupied by another woman. As the latter rose in bed he caught her by the throat and pushed her back. Thus he told her his story and his desire to see Christie, but she said Christie was not there.

A compact was made to keep the the barn, but wanus ad about the fields, and Christie was not there.

A compact was made to keep the matter of the visit a secret. When he heard Christie was going to the Grange, he went to the pasture, changed his clothes, and after suppor, went down back of A. Flint's house and waited for Christie.

Soon she came along with others of the family. Almy then described the meeting with the Warden party, as had been related by several witnesses, and been related by several witnesses, and said in going over the bars with his arm about Christle's waist they stumbled. Faunte was acceaning and he fired his revolver to keep her back. His full stunned him. His thought was that he must have Christle; there were sounds of voices coming nearer, and Christle was on the ground unconscions. In some way his revolver was fired, he did not know how. Then, when he saw Christle was shot, he exclaimed: "My tool, Christle is dead!"

chained. "My God, Christia is dead."
He was dazed. He went to the river, and resurred to the Warden barn, and watched the men who brought the body to the house. He told of visiting Christia's grave on several occasions. He could not realize that she was dead. never thought of being captured, and the feeling that be could not leave her chained him to the locality. Almy told his story in trembling tones, and frequently stopped to brush away the tears.

Almy was subjected to a sharp crossexamination, and admitted that his statement that he had relatives in Sayannah waa false. No evidence was al-lowed to prove that Almy is George H. Abbott, although the matter was once broached by the Attorney-General. At the conclusion of Almy's testimony both sides rested.

THAT ANARCHIST RAID. Some of Chicago's Police Likely to Suffer for the Arrests. CHICAGO, Nov. 19 .- It begins to look as though the city administration was to have a harder time fighting the anarchists than was anticipated. Mayor marchists than was acticipated. Mayor Mashburne has no more than a bare majority of the City Council at his back and even this majority may be broken into upon the demand of the trades unions, leaving the administration entirely at the march of the anarchists, socialists and labor element.

In such case the impeachment of the Superintendent of Police for ordering the raids upon the anarchists meetings is not among the improbabilities. condition of affairs has encouraged the anarchists and socialists greatly, and they talk of again openly defying the authority of the police. Should they do this the latter will show them no mercy whatever, but will resort to the club upon the slightest provocation. ## DR. SMITH HAS GONE

And With Him Has Disappeared Some $30,000.

AN ENDOWMENT ORDER SCHEME

The Doctor Let Two Friends Have $50,-000 to Buy the "Fraternal Circle"

This Was Deposited With Treasurer of Massachusetts, Who Refused to Give It Up Smith Had Taken the Money from an Institution of Which He Was Treasurer, and as He Couldn't Seitle He Skipped With All He Could Find.

LOWELL Mass., Nov. 10 .- An interesting chapter in the crash of the short term Endowment Orders developed here yesterday. Dr. Sumner P. Smith, treasurer of the six months' benefit order known as the Rising Sun, is a fugitive, and technically he is an embezzler

The State Treasurer, however, holds His Friends More Confident Than Ever $50,000 of that sum, but the remainder is in the possession of the missing treasurer. It is stated that the money was the re-election of Senator John Sher- taken by Smith in order to save for the

The cause that led to this state of af-fairs is interesting. Recently K. J. Mc-Kenzie, W. H. Jones and others tried to buy the order of the Fraternal Cir. cle. As alleged the inducement was that there was about $300,000 in the treasury, there was about $300,000 in the treasury, enough to pay about $200 each on the certificates, which could be bought for $120 each. This would give the purchasers a profit of over $100,000. In order to buy the Fraternal Circle, however, $50,000 was required for deposit at the State Treasury. McKenzie was associated with Dr. Smith, the treasurer of the Bising Sun, and the latter was persuaded, it is alleged to let the purchasers of the Fraternal Circle have $50,000 for one day. He let let the purchasers of the Fraternal Cir-cle have $50,000 for one day. He let them have the money and it went into the State Treasury, but it stayed there, the Treasurer refusing to recognize Mc-Kenzle and his associates as the legal successors of the original officers of the Fraternal Circle pending their re-elec-tion as such stockholders.

This put Smith in a trap, as the money was wanted for certificate holders of the Rising Sun and a charge of embezziement stared him in the face.

Thereupon he took what money re-mained in his charge and left town. President Lovejoy of the Rising Sun is now looking for him with Pinkerton detectives.

It is understood that Smith will come back if the matter can be arranged. It is said he is in hiding at present through advice of counsel.
