THE DEAD ACTOR.

Arrangements for Florence's Funeral Remintaneanes of His Life.

New York, Nov. 21.—The body of William J. Florence lies at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where the comedian had made his home for the past thirty years. It will remain here until Monday at 11 e'clock, when the funeral will take place from St. Agnes' Church. The interment will be in the family vault at Greenwood. Mrs. Florence is now on her way home, having sailed on the

her way home, having sailed on the Aurania.

There is no end now of stories about Mr. Florence, and the pranks he played. Florence, Ned Sothern, Nelse Seymour and Dan Bryant were a quartetta who made fun wherever they went.

At one time Florence and Sothern were both playing in St. Louis.—Florence in "The Mighty Dollar" and Sothern in either "Dundrosry" or "Brother Sam." In the midst of one of Florence's best scenes who should appear on the stage but Sothern, who had taken advantage of a half hour off in his own play to make a public visit to his friend.

The next night Florence called upon Sothern in the same way, and both andlences saw a double performance much to their delight. At another time, when Florence knew that Sothern was to be in St. Louis, he advertised for 1,000 buildings to be left at Dundreary's bloor.

Florence used to say the first practi-

Florence used to say the first practical joke that was ever played on him was the means of getting him out of a scrape, and he folt kindly toward that form of witterer since.

It was when he was a lad, playing minor consely parts in a Broadway theatre at $10 a week. He thought he was madly in love with a young across at work for the same stipend. During the play one night he invited her to take some overers after the performance. some oysters after the performance. Then he rushed to his lodgings, changed his clothes, met her and took her to an oyster house.

His bill there was $1.90, but unfortunately he found he had left his money in his other clothes. The waiter and the proprietor both said his story was too diaphanous, and made him give up his watch and his father's ring that he wore. Just then a whitchaired, benevolent looking old gentlesses came out of his watch and his father's ring that he wore. Just then a whitchaired, benevo-lent-looking old gentleman came out of one of the private dining compartments they used to have in those days and thundered at the proprietor. "Give that youth back his watch and chain and ring. Let me pay his bill. You ought to be asianmed, sir. Anyone can see this is an honest youth and his companion is a perfect haly. [The girl was in tears.] I will pay the bill and never set foot in your place again."

Out in the atreet Fiorence was overcome with grationic.

Out in the street Florence was overcome with graticule.

"Give me your address, sir," said he to the kindly old gentlement. "I will return you the money to moreow.

"Oh, never mind," said the philanthropist, "must was a counterfait. $20 bill I housed to has our food. It was worth nothing, and he gave me $18.10 change for it. That's the way I make my living. Gool wight."

Didn't Pay the Rent.

of town tells a taughable experience he had recently. He had charge of a lot of boys one day, and was trying to make them un derstand that all good comes from one source. As an illustration he told them of building a house, putting water pipes in with spigots in all the rooms, these pipes not being connected with the main in the street. He said to them:

"Suppose I turn on a spigot and no water comes, what is the marter?

He naturally supposed that some of the boys would answer that the water was not turned on at the main.

But they didn't. On the centrary, one boy at the feet of the class, called out in a voice which showed that he thought that he was right
