

NICE PLACE TO LIVE

Residence at Point Barrow
Described By Mr. Borden.

GOVERNMENT REFUGEE STATION

No Signs of Vegetation, and the Thermometer Star Fifty Degrees Below Zero.

The Velocity of the Wind Sixty Miles an Hour—Little Else is to Be Except to Try to Keep Warm—Not Another Mail Steamer Expected at the Sixteen Miles Next Deer—Bear and Fish Plentiful.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Living amid fields of ice, with no signs of vegetation, the thermometer fifty degrees below zero, and the wind blowing at the rate of sixty miles an hour, Superintendent Borden, of the United States refuge station at Point Barrow, the northernmost point of the Western Hemisphere, writes valiantly reports to the Treasury Department.

He explains that he has little else to do except to try to keep warm.

A batch of letters from Mr. Borden just reached here, and they cover dates from April to August, and all came on the same day.

He explains that he does not expect another vessel to leave for the United States until next year when the accumulated mail will be sent off.

His letters, or reports, treat of all manner of subjects. He tells how in that cold climate the "living house" needs repairs to keep out the snow and rain, how it is necessary to raise the floor to prevent the incoming through, and how those with him, a few white people, spend their time.

He tells how on Nov. 21, 1890, he was assailed by Andrew E. Larson, a white man. He says he should be punished in order to maintain the "honor and dignity" of the station, but there is no law to punish crime at Point Barrow.

He also says that some means be devised to punish deserters from vessels who flock to this place and become unruly and dangerous.

During the winter deer were plentiful and fish were furnished by the natives sufficient to meet all necessities for fresh food supplies. Ducks and partridges were quite plentiful. In the midst of ice, water was scarce and it was only obtained from shallow pools in the tundra or decayed vegetation and was hardly fit to drink.

But four births and seventeen deaths are reported during the year. The few birthers are accounted for by the fact that the women during confinement are put by themselves in a snow house and receive no attention.

The schools at first were well attended by the natives, but the novelty wearing away they are now but slightly attended.

Supt. Borden reports that on Sept. 18, 1890, the crew of the schooner Silver Wave mutinied. Subsequently the crew went on board a vessel, when told that they could not be supported at the station and proceeded on their way to San Francisco. The vessel was subsequently wrecked and abandoned. Mr. Borden thinks the vessel was purposely run ashore.

PRINCETON-YALE TO-DAY.

WALLY 30,000 People Expected to Attend the Great Football Game.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—From indications at this writing it may safely be estimated that fully 35,000 people will crowd the Manhattan Field to-morrow afternoon to witness the final football game of the season for the Inter-Collegiate championship between "varity" slaves of Yale and Princeton.

Everybody knows that the Princeton team is green, but muscular and willing. It is the sort of team that great things are expected of the following year. Only former Princeton teams, the present one is without a star performer, that hero of the gridiron who is always likely to make a hammar run or kick a goal from the forty-five yard line.

Mr. Moffat died five years since.

The nearest approach to the phenomenal is little Johnnie Fox, a full brother to the famous Peter, captain of last year's team. The young man is only a freshman, but began playing the game long before he came to the college. He will probably be the most interesting person on the field. He is a natural born half back, and can wrangle and dodge pretty better than any other player since the days of Laimer.

It is very safe to say that the best work of the Princeton team will be done by the quarter back King. There is a young man who has been largely overlooked by the chancellors of this popular sport. The chances are that few of the great things will fill the grounds will notice the little curly-headed boy that stands directly behind the line and passes the ball to the backs. He is usually engaged in making spangles for his men or warding off one of the would-be tacklers. As an individual exponent of the art of interferences King stands head and shoulders above all our players. In the game against the University of Pennsylvania players the long runs eroded to Humans, Fox and Flint were nearly all due to King's interference.

Placing his hand on the shoulder of the runner he guides him down the field while he wards off the men with the free hand.

The players on the Yale team have appeared so often in this neighborhood that most folks know something about them, if it is only their names. To read down the list the names of some of the young men who whalloped Princeton at Eastern Park last Thanksgiving Day will be found.

The betting on the game is light. Students and sporting men offer $3 to $ on Yale, but find few takers.

Gloucester Track Goes to Washington.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 26.—President Thompson, of the South Jersey Jockey Club, was returned from Washington ready to remove the Gloucester race track to the course at Hennings' Station, just outside the District of Columbia. It was a close call for Gloucester.

Mr. Thompson's visit came nearly being an unsuccessful one. As it was, however, he beat all competitors and secured the privilege of operating the track. Guttenburg was a close second.

Furtive Robbed by Unknown Thieves.

POTOMAC, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The post office here, located in R. P. Graham's store, was robbed of all its postage stamps and change and a registered letter Tuesday night by unknown thieves. There is no clue to the robbery.

ALMY BREAKS HIS DOOR.

Apprised by the Warden that he Had Been Sentenced to Death.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 26.—Almy, the condemned murderer, was to-day apprised of his fate by Warden Colbath of the State prison. He told the condemned man that he was condemned to death, and that his sentence would be carried out in December, 1892.

Almy paid the strictest attention while the warden was speaking to him, but when he concluded his remarks the prisoner cast his eyes on the floor of his cell and heaved a deep sigh.

The warden then handed him a letter sent to him by his counsel, Mr. Burleigh.

Almy opened the epistle and read a part of it, and then suddenly asked the warden if he could talk to him later on. The warden assured him that he would give him an audience at any time.

Nothing further transpired, and the warden left the condemned man's cell.

KM'S REVOLT IN BRAZIL.

A Speedy Settlement of the Troubles Expected Now That Fonseca is Out.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Latest cables from Rio Grande do Sul say that there is general and great rejoicing over the dictator's retirement.

It is believed that the annexation will now speedily come to an end and that navigation of the river will be promptly re-established.

MARSHES IN CHINA.

LOWSON, Nov. 26.—The "Standard" this morning has advised from China that the Government has decreed the printing and publishing of anti-foreign placards a capital offense, and has ordered those already convicted to be headed forthwith without waiting for the formal imperial authority. It was hoped that these stern measures would have a deterrent effect and convince the powers that the Government is in earnest, as under ordinary circumstances a period of two months would elapse before the executions.

Held for Shooting a Woman.

LOWSON, Mass., Nov. 26.—Henry P. Entwistle, who on October 7 shot Maria Clegg twice, has been held in $5,000 for the grand jury. One bullet penetrated a lung and has not yet been removed. Another shot took effect in the thigh. The girl has improved lately and is expected to recover.
