SUNK IN A COLLISION.

The Childwell Goes Down and Fifteen Men Perish—Reported Inhumanity.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The steamer Noordland, of the Red Star line, from Antwerp for New York, collided yesterday with the ship Childwell, which was arriving from Chili, loaded with saltpetre.

Fifteen of the crew of the Childwell were drowned in the collision. The survivors who were rescued by the British steamer Ipswick, of the Great Eastern line, claim that the Noordland, after crushing the bark, made no effort to help the crew, but hurried away from the spot.

A rigid investigation will be held as to the responsibility for the wreck, and the reported inhumanity of the Noordland.

THE DUBLIN EXPLOSION.

Still Believed that it Was a Dynamite Plot—Aid Asked from London.

DUBLIN, Jan. 4.—The explosion at Dublin Castle still occupies the attention of the Irish authorities. Major Cundill, the Inspector of Explosives, spent five hours in examining the rubbish in the vaults, where the explosion took place.

He believes that it may have been placed on the sill of the vault, the person who put it there then taking a hasty departure.

The authorities are undoubtedly inclined to the belief that it was a dynamite plot, which miscarried in operation, and that the intended victims were persons of much higher standing than the clerks of the Finance Department.

The Hendler Affair.

The Pottsville Chronicle, like the Republican, persistently jumps to defend Capt. Hendler when that gentleman is not in need of a champion.

Hendler and Betz's tavern transpired when the Chronicle writer was either unborn or a very tender age.

The 96th regiment was camping on Lawton's Hill at the time. Colonel H. L. Cate was a candidate for state senator.

On the night of the election in October, 1861, a party composed of members of the 96th were down town and entered Betz's tavern.

The small flag was pulled out and knocked down, and the riot started.

Edward Thomas, a sergeant in Co. A, 96th regiment, and who was one of the first defenders and as brave a man as ever carried a musket, was charged with being one of the leaders of the riot and a warrant for his arrest was issued.
