SELECTIONS FROM THE WRITINGS

OF THE DANBURY NEWS MAN. Mr. Perkins Had Never Tried to Do II Before, but He Found Out About It Sefore He Got Through-Ladies to the Rescue.

Copyrighted by Lee & Shepard, Boston, and published by special arrangement with them. It seems a pity that the glory of these bright May days should be marred by the gress materialism of soap and brush mop and broom, that the fragrant and delicate perfumes of budding nature and mind is harrowed by spectacles the little idiot than you can help, happiness we are allotted in this world. The manner in which does not warrant.

power of many brushes and cloths, and of much water and soap. At various hours when I have made my appearance near the house I have caught sight of her portly form through several windows, a flaring handkerchief concealing her temples and covering the site of her etriguon.

There was an expression of deep redness upon her features that pained me while I beheld, but which at the same loaf, and two decrepit herrings time led me to remark to myself that it was not the most favorable time for making a call, and thus looking and apprehending I would turn sally away

Monday morning we had our breakfast in our comfortable dining room. At noon I took my dinner from the lid of the ice chest. It was dreadful cold, and tasted clammy and disagreeable. In the evening I stood back of the stove and partook of a slice of bread (the butter had got misiaid) and drank some of last year's tea from the irregular spout of the milk pitcher. In the morning we ate breakfast in the sink (there was no fire in the stave, as it was to be kept cold for moving). The victuals had a flavor of great dampness and tasted as though they had been fished out of the soap bar-

After astonishing my internal structure with the meal, I accepted an invitation from Mrs. Perkins to take down the stove. In justice to myself it may be well to remark that I never took down a stove, nor was present when that intricate performance was going on, and this in a measure accounts for the slight unisgiving I may have entertained when brought face to face with the tremendone range

The conversation that ensued was something like this

"You want to use great care, Mr. Perkins, and not let the whole thing fall on you and kill yourself."

This appeared reasonable enough, and I readily promised to use my best endeavers to keep the whole thing from

"And, Mr. Perkins, don't get nervous with the pipe, because Mary Ann has just serubbed the floor, and that stuff gringes in awfully."

I hadn't the remotest idea of what the sinff could be that gringes in awfully. but I didn't like to show ignorance before Mary Ann and so I confidently responded Certainly not. "And be very careful about your clothes. Mr. Perkins, now, won't you? This appeal was delivered with so much confidence mingled with doubt that I hardly know whether to treat it as a compliment or a suspicion, and concluded it was best to split the difference and proserve stlenea.

We are all ready now, Mr. Perkins Mary Aun you come here and stendy the pipe while Mr. Perkins gets on the chair and takes it down."

Upon this I mounted a chair and grasped the pipe, but I must not neglect to mention that as i "rasped the pipe Mrs. Perkins grasped my tegs.

Goodness gracious, Cyrus Davidson Perious! don't you know better than to stand on one of the best chairs in the house and break right through the

I had to admit that I didn't know any better, but cheerfully got down and mounted another chair. This time I caught the pipe by its neck, and gave it a gentle pull from the chimney. It didn't move a bit, which encouraged me to believe I could bring a little more muscle into play, and under this impres-sion I gave an extra twist. It came this time, and so much more readily than I had reason to expect that I stepped down to the floor with it, passing over the top of the stove and rubbing off an inch or so of sicin from Mary Ann's nose.

"On, Moses!" screamed that lady.
"What have you done? Oh, what have you done? cried Mrs. Perkins.

Singularly enough, I didn't say anything, but got upon my feet as quick as I could and rubbed my head, and looked all around but where Mrs. Perkins and her weeping aid were standing. "It's just like a man. You have made ten times more work than you have helped. Mary Ann, get the floor cloth And there's a great spot on that floor we can never get off. I'd like to make a fool of myself, I know I should. I knew when you stuck your ungainly carcase on that chair you would kill somebody Does it hurt you, Mary Ann? I wouldn't

Then he tied the point pot on the end of the ladder and put the ladder on his shoulder. This was a very smart arrangement and the man himself admired it very much. He started for home this way and didn't find any trouble in getting along the first block, because people had an impression that a long ladder with a pot of yellow point dangling on the end of it wasn't exactly the thing to trifle with, so they balanced along on the curbstone or rubbed up against the

Pretty soon the man saw somebody in a store he knew, and he turned around to speak to him and drove one end of the ladder into a millinery case and knocked the crown out of an eighteen dollar bonnet. Then he backed off in affright and knocked down two sewing machine agents with the other end. Then he started to turn around, and an old gentleman who was desperately endeavoring to pull his wife out of danger saw the peril and shouted out, "Hi there!" But it was too late. The pot struck against an awning post, tipped to one side and the entire contents went over the aged couple. This so startled the man that he whirled completely around, smashing in an entire store front, frightening a milkman's team and knocking over some thirteen persons who were actively dodging about to get out of the way. he dropped the ladder and fled into the country, shouting "Murder" and "Fire" at every jump. A regularly ordained painter is now engaged on Mr. Watson's родие.
