The Young Birds Hatched in Large the United States to Declare War. Incubators.

> Business That Vields an Enormous A Profit, But Requires the Great-est Care-How the Plucktug Is Done.

The wife of an English ostrich-breeder in Cape Colony compares the young ostrich that has just cleared its nest to WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 .- A long dispatch edgehog mounted on stilts and prowas received yesterday afternoon at the vided with a long neck. The feathers are nothing more than grayish bristles, Navy Department from Commander Evans, and the code decipherers were while head and neck are covered with a hard at work on it until long after the fine, speckled down, soft as velvet. Very few ostriches are born nowa days out of captivity, for the fashion of the day has developed ostrich-breeding into one of the best-paying industries, which yields a handsome revenue to several countries, especially the deserts and waste lands of southern Africa.

The valuation of the South African export of ostrich feathers amounts to five million dollars per annum. Hunting the birds has ceased entirely, for they threatened to become extinct in some localities and a rational breeding by far the most remunerative pro ceeding. The value of the feathers varies with their quality. During the second year of his existence a male bird furnished two hundred and fifty thousand dollars' worth of first-quality plumes and about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars' worth of second grade An ostrich farm yields from thirty to fifty per cent. on its original invest-ment, and in prosperous times as high as one hundred per cent., says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The rational breeding of the ostrich is of vast importance to Cape Colony. Years ago birds were exported to Australia with such a favorable result that the government of the cape imposed a tax of five hundred dollars per bird and twenty-five dollars for every unhatched egg for exportation tariff, in order to protect its own industry. This killed the export entirely. In the year of 1875 the number of tame ostriches in the cape reached the astounding sum of thirty-two thousand, although the breeding of ostriches was not commenced until 1863. To-day that number has more than doubled itself, for in the meantime the incubators have been largely improved.

During the laying season, which comes with the end of the rainy period, the ostrich hen lays one egg every day until she has deposited from fifteen to twenty eggs in the sand-pile nest, a quantity just large enough to cover the same with her body when hatching. By gradually taking away one egg after another, as we do with our hens, the big bird can be induced to lay on an average of thirty eggs, and in exceptional cases even sixty eggs have been accumulated. These surplus eggs are artificially hatched in large incubators, but the eggs must be turned every day. In from eight to ten days the first signs of life are noticeable. Shortly before the young bird is ready to break the
