STATE COMMITTEE

Chairman Watres has issued a call for a meeting of the Republican State Committee to be held at the Continental Hotel, Philadelphia, to-morrow, to fix the time and place for the meeting of the State Convention of the party.

Last year there were 6,000 homicides and only 123 legal executions. Judge Lynch, however, got in his work to the number of 195.

Shortly after President Harrison's inauguration he appointed Patrick Egan Minister to Chili. Since then the Administration and Minister Egan have been targets for abuse from the Democratic and Mugwump press and leaders, simply because Egan was an Irishman. The scarcity of Irishmen in the Republican ranks is not due to any fault of the party. It has always stood by its friends, irrespective of nationality, and in the late war it fully recognized the gallant services of Sheridan, Meagher, Sigel, Rosecrans and others without regard to nationality. It is not surprising that the Democratic organs are attacking President Harrison and Mr. Egan, for a Democratic president has never conferred a like honor upon an Irishman and such being the case it seems singular that the Irish stick so tenaciously to the Democratic party.

When there is a call to arms the old war veterans will not be behind hand.

When it comes to nominating judges and inspectors of election in the several districts of this county at the approaching local primaries, special care should be taken to nominate men who are of alert intellect. Next fall the election will be conducted under the provisions of the Baker ballot law. The act is a long one and in the beginning of our busy citizens will have difficulty in understanding it, especially those who never looked at it and therefore will be to the polls in absolute ignorance of its provisions. It is to be hoped that special attention will be paid to the selection of election officers. Heretofore it has been the custom in many districts to select these officers without judgment.

MANY of the old war veterans are itching for another fight.

UNCLE JOHN CESSNA, "the canal boat statesman," is reported from Bedford to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for the Legislature. The indications are that the House will have some big men in it. Ex-Senator Wallace will be there, and it is likely that other prominent statesmen will appear in due time as candidates. And now comes Uncle John Cessna. The Senate must look to its laurels.—Harrisburg Telegram.

Peddler Saved by His Pack.

ALLENTOWNS, Pa., Jan. 28.—A Jersey Central passenger train at White Haven struck and instantly killed an Israelite named Cohen, who was walking on the track. At Yatesville another Hebrew, named Wentville, a notions peddler, with a heavy pack upon his back, was struck. The huge pack acted like a buffer, and instead of killing him he was thrown violently upon his back alongside the track. All hands thought he had been killed, but before the crew could reach him he was up and collecting his scattered wares.

Damage and Wreck on the Coast.

PORT JEFFERSON, L. I., Jan. 28.—The heavy storm of the past two days has done much damage along the coast, and a number of vessels are disabled and ashore. The schooners Nelson, J. C. Havens and E. Brush, and the sloop Nellie were driven ashore in the morning. The sloop James Humphreys dragged her anchor and collided with the sloop Stella, which was damaged, breaking her bowsprit. One oysterboat was sunk by the wind and ice. The harbor is full of ice.

THE RUSTLER!

HE TALKS OF THE MINER AND MINES.

THE COAL DIGGERS ARE HEROES.

Peculiar Ideas of the People of the Outside World Have of Coal Region Folks—An Interesting Article.

How many of our people have never seen the interior of a coal breaker or mine. At least two-thirds. And yet hardly a stranger who wanders into our valley leaves without seeing both. Why is this? Why do we hurry to Europe, become enthusiastic over the Rhine, and neglect seeing the Hudson or Niagara's wonderful flow? We gaze with wonder on the battle field of Waterloo, and fail to take a day off to see Gettysburg. I can't tell what people do these things, but they do.

I think we see no novelty in familiar objects. That is but natural. Yet we Pennsylvanians who supply warmth and comfort for nearly all America should take sufficient interest in the miner and the bread winner, to go down in the gloomy depths and learn from observation just how the miner earns his bread. I think in one trip you would find more penetrating warmth in the damp uncut coal than at your cheerful fireside. A warmth that would reach your hearts, for when you emerge into daylight it would be with a feeling of respect for the too seldom favorably considered miner. I am not a candidate for office, nor am I grinding an axe when I say that every man who works in the mine is a hero. It doesn't require a tripod down there to teach us this truth. That great historian of events, the newspaper, tells of their heroism every day. Scarcely a day passes but from under the surface comes the body of an unfortunate, who a few hours before went singing to his work. But another takes his place and the work goes on. "For man must work and women must weep."

The greatest heroes—the world has ever known—dashed to glory in a moment of excitement. Ask the hero of the battle field of his great capture of the enemies colors, and he'll tell you he was intoxicated with excitement and didn't realize the risk he was taking, or he never would have done it. That is if he tells the truth, and Ed. Mason is the only old soldier I know who will acknowledge that he wasn't a hero, and I believe him. Besides, in battle a man has a chance to fight and knows what to fight, a miner has no chance. With him it is a case of trust to luck. The coal may fall on him, the rope in the shaft break, the gas explode, the mine cave, the water drown him, a car run away, a premature blast occur, and he might come out alive, so he takes his chances. But he realizes his danger. It isn't a case of excitement; he knows he takes his life in his hands—no does it bravely and willingly. And all for bread.

Here's every one of them. We have had all kinds of accidents in this valley. Men have been shut in the mines, and it was necessary for others to take the chances of saving the living or joining the dead. And they have done it without hesitation. An explosion takes place in the mine—and everybody knows the fire damp—and other dangers are down in that hell. Yet there never has been a second call for volunteers. The great difficulty is to restrain men from going down—and yet we tell of the heroes of the battle field who died for country, write their names on the scroll of fame, and give a six-line notice in the newspaper to the miner who dies for his fellowman. Of course I am talking about something everybody knows, but strange to say we never stop to think about it, for if we did we would have more respect and praise for the brave fellows who earn their bread "down in the coal mines."

The great outside world has peculiar ideas about we fellows in the coal regions. In New York a few weeks ago I walked into a club room with a friend, and was somewhat surprised to discover that about fifty of the inmates were gazing curiously at me. I at first thought it was through idle curiosity, but when they began whispering and nodding in my direction, I thought something was up, and told my companion so. He only smiled. After he had introduced me all around and I was sitting in the coal fields? I began to suspect something, and then learned the truth. My friend had announced that on that evening he would bring a miner from the coal region to the club, and the boys had assembled, expecting to see a big six footer, with a big six shooter, walk in with his pants in his boots, and were disappointed, that's all. I was obliged to make a speech in defence of my town and people for a scented dude said "How do you like living in a camp?"

After I had talked for about an hour on life in the coal fields I heard one chappie say to another, "That fellow is giving us a bluff. He is no more from the coal fields than I am." THE RUSTLER

A HORRIBLE DISASTER.

An Engine Explodes and Kills Five Men.

One of the gigantic "mogul" engines used on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad exploded at Newcastle this morning with dreadful effect.

The engineer, fireman and three other members of the crew were killed outright. The engine was drawing a train of empty coal cars and was opposite Dark Water station of the Pennsylvania railroad when it exploded. The engine and many of the cars were blown to fragments and some of the parts were blown over to and against the embankment of the latter road. Zeigler and Hawley, two of the men killed were survivors of the engine explosion that took place at St. Clair some time ago.

There were two other accidents on the P. & R. road to-day. A train parted in the East Mahanoy tunnel this morning and traffic was delayed for nearly two hours.

This afternoon traffic on the Shenandoah-Mahanoy Plane branch was delayed for some time by a coal train leaving the rails at Kohinor Junction.

TWO MORE WRECKS.

A Pennsylvania Railroad Engineer Reported Killed.

New Boston Junc., Jan. 28, 1:15 p. m.—A Pennsylvania and a Lehigh Valley passenger train collided here at 1 p. m., engines foremost. The Pennsylvania engineer, named Dietrich, was killed. No others injured.

The Lehigh Valley train was in charge of James Kelly, conductor, Benjamin Waters, engineer. It was bound from Pottsville to Delano and ran into the Pennsylvania train, which was in charge of Zach. Moyer, conductor.

The cause of the collision is not fixed.

AT SCHUYLKILL HAVEN.

At an early hour this morning the fast Pennsylvania train running between Pottsville and Philadelphia ran into a freight train that was being side-tracked at this place to give the passenger a clear track. No one was injured. The passenger engine and several of the freight cars were badly wrecked.

"Old Miner" Dreams.

EDITOR HERALD.—La Grippe is still making gigantic strides in every ward of the borough. However, it is not like our county seat people—hog-b. It treats all alike. Many of my fellow-workmen are wrestling manfully with it and I have been in the battle with them, consequently I have had some terrible dreams of late. Phantoms of every conceivable shape presented themselves. I imagined the air fan was broken and asked the mine boss for permission to investigate and ascertain the cause. Upon the request being granted I repaired to the air shaft and a fearful spectacle presented itself. Some miscreant had collected all the water irruptions and petitions, maps of the new water works, together with the costs, and Mr. Davenport's lithographs and hurled them down the shaft with the evident intention of implicating the mines with the borough. My second vision was different. It was election day and the politicians were indicted with influenza. The election was not conducted on the Australian plan; on the contrary, each office seeker was stationed at the polls, armed with a five gallon demijohn. The voters were supplied with tickets and one swig with a promise of three more dips if he should cast his vote for every candidate in the field. In my last vision I saw fifteen men, representatives of the borough carrying a huge casting upon their shoulders with the following inscription, made of gilt-edged wall paper: "A Well Elephant Crusher For Sale." When I awoke I was extremely thankful that one honest man had expressed himself to a reporter that the borough had expended $5,000 for that which was not bread. I agree with Contract Labor Inspectors Conkling and Osborne when they say the law protecting American labor is practically useless. I will speak of that again. I have no oil and my lamp will not burn. Unfortunately I cannot speak the Hungarian lara. When I show them my empty lamp they elevate one shoulder two feet above the other and answer, "Sepulsky, Sepulsky. No zere, no zere." OLD MINER

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my sheen ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all, eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at C. H. Hagenbuch's drug store, regular size, 50c. and $1.00.

Shea To-night.

The opera house held a very large number of people last evening, the occasion was the reappearance of Actor Thomas E. Shea after a year's absence. Mr. Shea has no cause to complain of his reception nor can his friends, the public, complain of his entertainment. The play, "Barred Out," is a very interesting drama, made doubly so when characterized by so clever a company as the Shea organization, most of which played their parts excellently well last evening. Shea himself always at home as a romantic hero, gave evidence of improvement as Eric Marmaduke. All his speeches, that had the heroic ring, were appreciated and in turn loudly applauded. The singing and dancing were exceptionally good features and encore after encore was the order. Good business will no doubt be the rule.—Omaha World Herald. Thos. E. Shea and company begin a three-night engagement in Ferguson's theatre this evening, opening it with "Escaped from Sing Sing."
