Minister Smith Writes of Russia's Condition.

TRUSTWORTHY ACCOUNT.

The District Affected Larger Than Germany, With 27,000,000 Population-

The Searchy of Provisions Not the Only Misery of the People-Lack of Fuel Causes Great Distress, While Pestilence is Decimating the Population-The Czar Has Given Enormously-Bussia's Loss said to Amount to One Thousand

Washington, Feb. 2.—In response to many sympathetic inquiries and proffers of ald received from friends in the United States, the Department of State has received from Minister Smith at St. Petersburg, an interesting report of the actual conditions of the stricken districts of Russia, prepared from evidence of eyewitnesses and most trustworthy sources of which the following is an epitome:

The territory affected by the drought compromises thirteen provinces of European Russia, where the famine is general and in five other provinces where it prevalis in part.

The first thirteen provinces in area are one-third greater than all termany, the population being about twenty-seven

This vast section is agricultural, and the richest, and, ordinarily, the most fruitful soil of Russia. An official estimate of the number of those without food or vacans of support, who require aid, is given as 14,000,000 persons, and this is probably below the persons, and this is probably below the true number.

The great proportion of peasantry is not provident. The peasants make no savings, but live wholly dependent upon yearly crops, hence long-continued and wide-spreading drought leaves them subject to outside relief.

The correlity of provisions is not the ject to outside relief.

The scarcity of provisions is not the only misery of the people. The crops are the foundation of their whole economic structure. When their crops fail, various evils follow. The government loses revenue and the peasants lack all the necessaries of life—clothing, firewood, farming implements, subsistence of horses and earlier all dependances the of horses and cattle, all dependupon this resource, the crops. The taxes and rental continue and it is as difficult to get fuel as food in some sections.

Cold as well as hunger cause terrible suffering. Large numbers of persons huddle together in some houses most conducive to warmth, and thatched roofs are torn off and the straw fed to the dying embers. Clothing is given away for bread. . Horses and cattle are sacri-ficed. Fodder is as scarce as human food, and in some cases horse flesh has been used for sustenance.

During the winter there is no work, and frequently fathers have left their wives and children to fight the battle of want alone, because they could do noth-ing and their absence would leave fewer mouths to feed at home. The bread many are cating is composed of wild arrock, potatoes, chaff and leaves. And these terrible conditions produce disease.

Within the radius of one mile there are 120 cases of typhus fever; pestilence and hunger are daily gaining ground and pestilence is deciminating the people.

The Russian Emperor has personally given enormously, and all classes are giving according to their means. The loss to the government revenue will be at least 200,000,000 roubles, about $100,-000,000 or more, while a conservative estimate of the loss to Russia, in view of all consequences, is placed at not less than 1,000,000,000 roubles.

CARING FOR PEARLS.

Simple Preservative to Give These Stones a Bright Appearance-One of the most beautiful and costly ets of pearl jewels ever made was an heirloom in the Egmont family, of Hol-land, says a writer in Kate Field's Wash-During the war which led to the establishment of the Dutch republic Count Egmont of that time, pawned the jewels to the Venetian government for a large sum of money, which was used to further the efforts of the liberal party. Afterward the pearls were re-deemed, and when a later Count Egmont married the daughter of the duke of Richelion this magnificent treasure was bestowed upon the bride, who frequently displayed its splendor at the court of Louis XVL and Marie Antoinette.

Every one who knows the fragile nature of pearls was astonished at the freshness and purity of color of those exceedingly old jewels, and Count Eg-mont explained the mystery by imparting the family rule concerning their care, which was simply to inclose piece of the root of the ash tree in the box which held the jewels,

There seems to be no visible connection between ash trees and pearls, and Buffon, the naturalist, who was told of ! the recipe, said it was all nonsense; but the fact remains that the Egmont pearls, which had been treated after that rule for centuries, had never faded or become tarnished, while much newer pearls had shown discoloration or lost their luster after a few years' possession

This rule is like many other popular prescriptions which are considered superstitions, but which nevertheless are founded upon an unfailing though undiscovered law. The wonder is how these mysterious alliances between natural substances become known to mankind.

SHIPS A HUNDRED YEARS OLD.

he Juno of Beaumaris Was One Hun-dred and Siz Years Old When Wrecked. From the table in the last board of trade reports respecting casualties to ships, which shows the ages of vessels, it is surprising to find how very ancient many of the craft still doing service really are. Thirty-nine sailing vessels are between fifty and sixty years old, eighteen are between sixty and seventy years, thirty are between seventy and one hundred, and six are actually above a century old. While these numbers represent only a very small proportion of such ancient mariners still sailing the wintry seas," it must not be thought they refer only to barges or craft engaged in river or inland navi-

The Juno of Beaumaris, built one hundred and six years ago, met with her mishap while on a coasting voyage, and the Endeavor, Plymouth, a still older craff, in seeking to act up to her name came to grief while on a voyage from Dunkirk. What is more surpris ing still, the same casualty list contains the names of two steamships, one above originally been built as sailing vessels, as the periods named carry us much farther back than the date at which the Sirius made her famous voyage across the Atlantic. With regard to the ancient sailing vessels, too, they must have little or nothing of the original structure left. As long as there is one single plank, however, the vessel retains her identity.
