ASt. Helens Jeweler Who Sold Deeming Dinmonds Says That He Was Well Supplied With Wealth-Digging at Dinham Villa Continued, But No More Bodies Are Found-Thousands of Curious People Visit the Place.

LONDON, March 18. - It has been learned that Williams is not the man who married Miss Matheson of Beverly in 1890, and subsequently deserted her. The boxes which Williams had shipped from Dinham Villa to Plymouth have been found and opened. From the contents it was ascertained that the names of three of Williams' children were Bertha, Marie and Lilla. In each the last names, "Deeming," was followed by the words "of bydney."

Information as regards the life of the Rainbill murderer, Desming, alias Williams, has been obtained from the brother of Marie James, who, with her children, was killed at Dinham Villa.

James says that Deeming was a stew ard on a trader plying between Birkenard on a trader plying between Birken-head and American ports before his mar-riage, and after it went to Australia alone, ostensibly to try his fortune. He left his wife in England, but returned for her a year later. They went back to Australia and lived there for nine years. When they came to England at the end of that time, Deeming seemed to have a great deal of money. He said he "had made a pile in gold mining" and nessi passer work again. He remained at home never work again. He remained at home only about week, and afterward appeared at Birkenhead and Tranmere only for a

James learned from persons who had known Deeming in other cities and from the callers letters that Deeming had several allases, but was never able to elicit from him the reason. When pressed as to his object in assuming false names Deeming usually told im-probable stories about his great business probable stories about his great business enterprises in which he would suffer if his identity was known.

Ben Young, the laborer who went to Dinham Villa to fix the floors, says that Williams, or Deeming, excused himself for having done part of the work by saying that he wanted exercise. Deeming also said he was anxious to have the floors solidly laid, as they would be used by an old gentleman who had very valuable carpets.

A jeweler at St. Helen's who sold Deeming several diamond rings, says he was always well supplied with wealth, and often drew from his pockets nug-gets which he said he had dug in Aus-tralia. What Deeming did with the rings has not been learned. He wore but one diamond, and it is surmised that the others were used by him in relations with women which are still unrevealed. The digging at Dinham Villa was continued during the afternoon, but no more bodies were found. The house was guarded by policemen last night, and to-day an examination of the rest of the floor and of the ground immediately surrounding the house will be made. Thousands of people have been out from Liverpool to see the scene of the trage-dies, and the park around the house was cleared with difficulty by the police at

New York, March 18 .- At the banquet last night of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, Secretary of the Treasury Foster was present. He was called upon for a speech, and was introduced as a repre sentative of the nation. He said:

"I do not intend to trespass upon your time. While I was invited this after noon by your worthy chairman, I was informed, and it was part of the agreement, that I was not to make any expla nation about 'flannel-mouthed Irishmen. [Laughter.]

"A little over three weeks ago I left this country for a trip to Europe. I have returned this morning. I find that have returned this morning. I find that the Treasury and the gold in the Treasury have both increased. [Laughter.] This talk about a bankrupt Treasury and the works of a billion dollar Congress in effecting this result is dissipated. It's my opinion that this thing is not going to happen. [Applause.] I was looking at this ancience to-night, composed mainly of Irishmen, and the thought occurred to me that our accestors never occurred to me that our ancestors never sat at a banquet like this. It is fortunate for the Irish people—fortunate for the people of other lands—that they are able to come to a country like this. There is nothing like it on the face of the earth. The race in life is equally between all. The race in life is equally between all,
