DEMOCRATIC TRICKERY.

The telegraphic announcement that after protracted incubation the Democratic Legislature of Missouri has finally agreed upon a bill of apportionment which will give its party fourteen out of the fifteen members of Congress in a state which casts 235,000 Republican votes as against 261,000 Democratic votes, in connection with similar partisan work going on elsewhere, is directing public attention with renewed interest to the modern and dangerous art of political gerrymandering.

It is the trick by which minorities and not majorities are enabled to rule. And on the other hand it is the adroit and efficacious means by which the voice of minorities is in most cases entirely suppressed. Naturally enough it originated in the fertile brain of a Jeffersonian Democrat, Mr. Elbridge Gerry, Massachusetts, from which it takes its name, nearly eighty years ago. If the defunct Massachusetts statesman could see how his sharp scheme had been developed and utilized by dishonest successors in all quarters of the country, he would turn over in his grave for very wonder.

THERE was a good deal of talk in the latter part of November, 1890, of how the big Democratic majority would sit on Czar Reed when they get him back on the floor in the minority. There has not as yet been any Democrat developed who cared to sit on a volcano of this kind.

WHEN it comes to passing pension bills, the militia will have to be called out to get together a quorum of this Democratic House. In the three evening sessions that have been thus far held to consider pension bills not a single one has been passed. Buck

TWO BRAKEMEN KILLED IN A WRECK.

A HORROR AT FRACKVILLE EARLY THIS MORNING.

CAUSED BY A RUNAWAY GOAL TRAIN

Goldman and Ring in Jail—A Clever Ruse by Which They Were Brought Into the State Again and Captured. They Will be Held Now.

THE grim reaper played a part in a coal train near Frackville at an early hour this morning. Two men lost their lives and thirty cars were smashed into kindling wood. The victims were two brakemen, one named Troy and residing at Port Carbon, and the other named Braz, a resident of St. Clair.

Two empty Philadelphia & Reading coal trains left Frackville for St. Clair shortly after midnight. The grade on this section of the road is a very heavy one. The engineer of the second train lost control of it and it ran into the train ahead, piling the cars in an immense heap and scattering the debris in such a manner as to make the line useless for traffic. The two brakemen were instantly killed. The engineer of the second train escaped, but his fireman was badly injured.

As this section of the P. & R. road is used by the Pennsylvania short line between this town and Pottsville, traffic on that line was suspended on account of the wreck and all passengers for Pottsville were obliged to take the Dolano and New Boston route. The wreck was cleared away in time for all trains to run according to the schedules at noon.

Deserving Praise.
We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell so well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. C. H. Hagenbuch, Druggist.

PERSONAL.

DEATH OF M. M. L'VELLE.

He Expired at His Home in Ashland This Morning. Special to the HERALD.

ASHLAND, Mar. 30.—M. M. L'Velle, Esq., the well known and distinguished lawyer, died at his residence in this town at 9:30 o'clock this morning. Mr. L'Velle had been in poor health for many months, but his death was quite unexpected. He was in attendance at court last week. Mr. L'Velle was a passenger on one of the trains that collided at New Boston several weeks ago and the shock sustained at that time, following close upon his convalescence after an attack of typhoid fever that almost caused his death, is supposed to have contributed to the sad end. The deceased was one of the most prominent and respected members of the bar in this section of the state and he was looked upon as one of the foremost candidates for District Attorney of this county next fall.

A $5 Crayon Free.
There has been so much trouble lately concerning picture agents that people know not whom to trust. Some weeks ago I warned the citizens of Shenandoah concerning certain grades of work. Now I am in direct competition with this class but I want it understood that I furnish bonnet work, well worth the price, and guarantee satisfaction. My agent has visited every house in Shenandoah and surrounding towns and patches and has done an enormous business. I will positively close my offer one week from Saturday next. If there are any who wish to take advantage of it they must call at once at the gallery and secure a ticket which entitles them to a dozen of our best finished cabinets and one 14x17 crayon for $3.50. We do not expect you to buy a frame for three times what it is worth, nor do we care to sell you a frame at all. You can have the crayon gratis. We make the offer in good faith and invite you to take advantage of this, our last, offer in crayons. The price, after next week, will be $5.00 for the crayon alone.

ANTHRACITE SUPPLY AND DISTRIBUTION.

INTERESTING PAPERS ON THE GREAT COAL FIELDS.

RESOURCES OF BEDS COMPARED

History of the Production of Anthracite Coal—How the Fuel is Produced. When it Was First Put to Use And Other Historical Facts.

IN a recent issue of the Forum was published an excellent paper on the supply and distribution of Anthracite coal. The paper is from the pen of Joseph S. Harris, president of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, and has attracted widespread attention. The HERALD readers will read it with interest. The subject has been so fully considered the paper cannot be published in its entirety.

The greatest known deposit of anthracite coal is that of eastern Pennsylvania, in which locality it occurs over a region containing about 1,700 square miles, though the area which is actually underlain with workable beds does not exceed 483 square miles. Its chief geological divisions are known as the Wyoming, the Lehigh and the Schuylkill regions, and the coals these districts produce are similarly designated. They differ somewhat in their chemical and mechanical peculiarities, though in many instances their chief distinction is that they reach their market by certain transportation routes, for it has often occurred that the coal produced at a certain colliery was classed as Lehigh coal if it were carried over either of the Lehigh roads, and was called Schuylkill coal if carried over the Reading R. R.

It may, however, be said that in general in the Wyoming region the coal beds are more nearly horizontal, are geologically less disturbed, and the gaseous ingredients not having been so thoroughly driven off, the coals are more free-burning than those of the other districts. The latter characteristic makes their smaller coals, which are used largely for the production of steam, more desirable than the same sizes of the harder coals, as they are more easily ignited and more quickly responsive to increased draft when the fire burns low and needs to be quickened to greater activity. The process of coal formation seems also to have gone on in this region with less interruption from the intercalation of beds of other material forming slates, so that the coal is much more rapidly prepared for market, and to that extent is more cheaply produced than that of the other regions.

The Lehigh region is characterized by coals of denser structure with little volatile matter so that they do not readily ignite. They last well in the fire, and are therefore specially in demand for metallurgical purposes requiring a high and continuous heat, but the small coals are difficult to burn steadily, and respond slowly to forced draft, so that while they produce great heat, they are not favorites with firemen, being troublesome in comparison with Wyoming coals.

During the period of coal formation the Schuylkill region was subject to interruptions of the plant growth, and to the deposit of strata of slate and other impurities between the beds of coal. Where these are intercalated and interstratified with the subdivisions of the coal beds and cannot be separated from the coal before they are taken from the mine, it follows that much refuse must be hoisted to the surface, and afterward laboriously picked out from the coal, which processes considerably increase the cost of producing coal in this region.

The dividing line between the Lehigh and the Schuylkill regions has been variously drawn, and the estimates of the areas of the two regions are therefore somewhat discrepant. There are also differing estimates of the average aggregate thickness of the coal beds in the three regions, but one of the most careful estimates is as follows:

Square miles.	Per cent. of total anthracite.
Wyoming region.....194	34
Lehigh region.....51	9
Schuylkill region.....229	57

The same estimate gave as the total original contents of these anthracite beds, based upon the above estimated areas and the estimated average thickness of the coal beds, 14,453,897,600 cubic yards of coal, or the same number of tons, if as is frequently done, the cubic yard and the ton of 2,240 pounds are assumed to be equivalent quantities.

Pennsylvania anthracite was first put to practical use in the year 1768 in a blacksmith forge by two brothers named Gore. The first shipment to a distant market was made in the flatboats which in 1775 were sent down the Susquehanna river with coal for the government armory at Carlisle; but no organized effort was made to mine it all 1793, when the Lehigh Coal Mine Company was formed to work the deposit at Summit Hill, near Mauch Chunk. The enterprise developed slowly, and it was not till 1833 that the company started six flatboats, or river arcs, containing each ten tons of coal down the Lehigh river. Of these only two reached Philadelphia, and, as no one knew how to burn the coal, this special coal being the hardest of all the anthracites, the venture resulted in failure; and it was not till 1829 that the shipment from the same mines at 65 tons marked the real beginning of the trade, which has since grown steadily, carrying the production of this fuel up to 100,000 tons in 1829, to 1,000,000 tons 1842, to 10,000,000 tons in 1864, and to 40,000,000 tons in 1891.

THE FUGITIVES CAPTURED.

Goldman and Ring Were Arrested in Town Last Night.

Max Goldman and L. Ring, the two local merchants who skipped to New York last week after their conviction in the Pottsville court on a charge of defrauding their creditors, were arrested in town last night by Constable Boland.

The ruse by which the two men were brought within the jurisdiction of the court and placed in custody was a clever one.

When Goldman and Ring skipped out they forfeited the bond furnished for them by I. Robbins, at Pottsville. While the men were away some of their friends here made efforts to secure bail for them so they could return and apply for a new trial. It is understood that Mr. Robbins, in consideration of a bonus of $200, and with a view to getting the men again within the jurisdiction of the court and thus relieve himself of the forfeiture of the first bond, consented to furnish new bonds. Goldman and Ring were then notified that bail had been secured and all that was necessary to put things right was their return here to attach their signatures to the bonds.

The two men left New York yesterday and arrived here last night. Upon their arrival being made certain Mr. Robbins withdrew the bail and surrendered the men to the jurisdiction of the court. Constable Boland found Goldman and Ring enjoying themselves at a game of cards and placed them under arrest. The sudden turn of affairs was an astounding surprise to the men and more dejected individuals never walked into the lockup. The arrest was made after 11 o'clock and Boland thought it would be safer to keep the prisoners in the lockup until they could be taken to Pottsville. They remained in a cell until this morning, when Chief Burgess Smith tried to raise their spirits with some coffee. The beverage was relished, but the spirits of the men remained below zero. They fully understood that they had been trapped. One of them said, "I thought it was queer that we should be compelled to come on here and sign the bonds. I thought that could have been done just as well while we were away."

Goldman seemed broken hearted when he boarded the train for Pottsville this morning. Blug pretended to be confident and indifferent.

"Are you going away again, gentlemen?" asked a HERALD reporter.

"I am going to Pottsville on a little business," said Goldman.

"Are you coming back?"

"I don't think I will," said Ring. "I will go to Pottsville and enter bail for a new trial and then I will go to New York."

The prospects this morning were that neither Goldman or Ring would be able to return to town or go to New York for a while. It was generally believed that the men could not arrange for bail and even if they could secure it the court might hesitate to accept, in view of the previous forfeiture and disappearance. Should the court take this stand the men will be obliged to remain in the Pottsville jail until, at least, the May term of criminal court.
