An Englishman Tries to Commit Suicide But is Prevented by His Roommate.

Men Ron About the Boat Half-Dressed, Women Screamed and Could Not be Appeased Until Assured that Nothing Serious Had Huppensd-The Would-be Suicide's Nerve Faited Him at the Last Moment-Sick and Out of Work.

New York, March 34. - When the Sound steamer Plymouth was passing Fort Schuyler on her way to New York from Boston in the morning at 3:30 o'clock the passengers were awakened by the report of two pistol shots in rapid succession. In an instant the boat was in an uproar, and men half dressed were running about the deck in the cool morning air to find out what had hap-

Women screamed and would not be appeased until the officers of the boat had explained that nothing serious had happened.

The sight that met the eyes of the men did not tend to allay their fears. They saw two men running round the deck.

Both were without their outer clothing: An elderly man was running and pursuing him was a younger man with a smoking revolver in his hand.

The officers and passengers started in pursuit of them. The man with the pistol was overhauled and the weapon taken from him, while the other man ran back to his stateroom. ran back to his stateroom.

An immediate investigation was insti-ted. The prisoner, it was found, was a young Englishman named Arthur J. Howson, of No. 120 Harrison street, Boston. The other man was Anton Kennedy, also of Boston. Both occupied the same stateroom.

This is Mr. Kennedy's story: "When the boat left her Boston pier I found Mr. Howson already occupying his share of the stateroom. I bade him 'good after-noon,' and he replied pleasantly. After dinner he went to the cabin and was en-gaged for a long time in writing a letter. anged for a long time in writing a letter. At times he would burst out crying, and I felt sorry for him. About 10 o'clock we both turned into our bunks, but before going to sleep I asked him if he was in trouble. THE RAINHILL ASSASSIN. Deeming Says if He Has to Swing He Will MELHOURNE, March 31 .- Deeming arrived at Adelaide yesterday morning and was seen by a reporter. He passed his time during the trip in playing draughts, On deck and in the cabin he was watched constantly by marines and detectives. He has grown thinner and more nervous under the strain.

An Adelaide reporter says that his features are sharper and his eyes are more ferret like than has been represented. He has a cruel mouth with thin lips which twitch almost constantly.

Deeming complained to the reporter than no written statement of the Rain-hill discoveries had been supplied to him. He said to one of the detectives shortly before his arrival in Adelaide:

"Well, if I have to swing, I will swing like a man and not like a coward.

Desperate Fight With Railroad Thieves.

ONE MAN SHOT BY DETECTIVES

Two Thousand Dollars Worth of Goods Thrown from a Freight Car.

A Tailor Who Was Negotiating With the Crooks for the Purchase of the Goods Also Arrested. Three of the Robbers and the Tailor Taken to the County Jail in Huckensack and Locked Up-One of the Gang Escaped.

HACKENBACK, N. J., March 31 .- A desperate fight marked an arrest made yes terday at Warren Point, near Hacken Three enterprising car-thieves were taken into custody. One of them was shot before the gang would submit. They had broken open a car of the Erie Railway and stolen drygoods worth several hundred dollars.

Bernard Kahn, a Jewish tailor, baving a store in New York, was visited about 10 o'clock Tuesday morning by four strangers. They asked him if he wanted to purchase a quantity of first class dry whom the Government ordered out of France for using language alleged to be insulting to the French army, has left Hoboken Ferry and the Hoboken Ferry and goods "at hed rock prices." He said that plank road.

They reached the Warren Point depo by midnight. The horse was tied near the depot, and the four men took the goods which they wished to sell from beneath the railroad platform. Kahn said the goods were damp from being exposed to the air, and asked why they exposed to the air, and asked why they were thore.

The words were nardly out of his mouth when four men stepped from hid-ing places and confronted the tailor and his companions, Their appearance startled Kahn especially as they held revolvers pointed at him and his com-panions. One of them commanded the five to hold up their hands.

The tailor promptly obeyed, but his companious made a dash at the new-comers and a lively fight followed. The others were getting the worst of the bat-tle when a pistol was fired, and the man who had conducted the negotiations with Kaha attack a groun, clasped his hands over his some and fell heavily to the

them to the jail in Hackensack.

Here Kahn learned the truth of the proceedings which had seemed so strange o him. The four men were thieves, and had broken into a car on the Eric Railroad, near Spring Tank, while the train of which the car was a part was replenisning its water supply. They had dropped about $3,000 worth of Irish point curtains, a roll of imported dross velvet, a roll of Brussels carpet, fifteen rolls of black dress goods, three rolls of table linen, a roll of red dress goods and three boxes of domestic lace curtaining from the car to the ground. The train moved off without the robbery being discovered, and the thieves had secreted the goods under the Warren Point depot platform. The robbery was discovered when the train reached Ramapo.
