Strange Infatuation of One Woman for Another.

EMMA FOX COMMITS SUICIDE.

She Said She Would Kill Miss Boate and Herself if She Lost Her Friendship.

The Threat Only Partly Fulfilled-Miss Fox Was a Handsome Brunette, Well Educated and Very Religious-It Made Her Augry to See Miss Boute with Aug One-she Was Repelled and then Shot Herself with a 32-calibre Revolver.

ALTOONA, Pa., April 1. - Miss Emma Fox, aged about 23, shot herself in the abdomen almost in the presence of Miss Birdle Boate, with whom she was strangely infatuated and who had re-pelled her friendship. She died a few moments afterwards. A coroner's jury found a verdict of suicide, but assigned no cause for the self-murder. The circumstances of her infatuation for Miss. Boate furnish the clue to it.

Miss Fox was a handsome brunette, a young woman of many graces, well edu cated and deeply religious. She attended faithfully the Lutheran Church, of which she was a member. An orphan, she lived with her brothers, from whom she kept the secret of her love for Miss

Miss Boats is a decided blonds, about 28 years old. She is a seamstress, and she resides with her parents. She and Miss Fox had been acquaintances for years. About nine months ago Miss Fox began to demonstrate an extraordinary affection for her. About that time the Boste family were attacked with dipu-theria, and four of its members died. Miss Fox, without solicitation, estab-lished herself in the Boate home, and nursed the sick with assiduous care. he refused to go to her own home until all the survivors were convalescent. seemed only content when near Miss

After that event Mr. Boats became After that event arr house became alarmed by the affection expressed by Miss Fox for his daughter and forbade their association. Miss Boate, who had never returned the affection of the other, informed Miss Fox of her father's com-mand. From that time on Miss Fox always intercepted Miss Boate whenever she went down town, and would insist on walking with her. She was angered whenever she saw her with any one

Recently Miss Boate was compelled to walk home from her work after dark and, fearing that Miss Fox would trouble her, secured a male escort. They were met by Miss Fox, who tried to push Miss Boate's escort away, saying that she would accompany the young woman to her home. Miss Boate refused her com-pany and Miss Fox was very much angered.

A few days later Miss fox met Miss Boate in the street and said: "Birdle, if you will not be my friend I will kill you and then myself." Miss Boate thenceforth tried to avoid the girl.

Miss Boate and her sister in law were returning home from the Baptist Mission and were joined by Miss Fox, who im-plored them to take her to her home. Fearing her they walked on as rapidly as possible, trying to rid themselves of her presence. She followed them to Fourteenth avenue, a short distance from Miss Boate's home. Then she draw a revolver from her pocket and flourish-ing it cried: "Here I go, Birdie, in your

Miss Boate and her companion ran to their house. While they were running they heard a revolver shot, followed by several agonizing screams. Several per-sens ran to the place and found Miss Fox lying on the ground.

She did not speak after being found, and died in a few minutes.
