AFRAID OF MAY DAY

Fears that the Anarchists Will Do Bloody Work.

EXTRA PRECAUTIONS IN PARIS.

A Large Force of Troops Ready to Suppress Any Disorder.

No Demonstration of Any Kind to be Allowed—The Authorities Say They Do Not Anticipate Much Trouble—Great Excitement at Dijon Over the Attempt to Blow Up the Town Hall—Police severely Criticized.

PARIS, April 30.—The many dynamite outrages of the past few months have caused a feeling that, despite the reiterated assurances of the authorities that no trouble will occur on May Day, the 1st of May will witness rioting and bloodshed, not only in Paris, but also in the various labor employing sections throughout the country.

Notwithstanding the assertions that the Anarchists have no organization, that each individual acts on his own responsibility, the public generally point out the recent explosions and the attempts to cause explosions as direct proof to the contrary, claiming that the whole series of outrages have been the work of a regularly organized band of Anarchists.

Through the authorities have repeatedly said that no trouble was anticipated in this city, they are nevertheless taking the most extensive precautions to repress any disorders.

The municipal elections take place tomorrow throughout France, except in Paris, and it is feared that the crowds in the towns where elections occur, excited by the partisan feeling, may perhaps fall an easy prey to the Anarchist agitators, who are certain to inveigh against government and society if the occasion offers.

In Paris, which city is governed by a special law in regard to the municipal elections, no disturbances of a political nature will, of course, occur. The Anarchists, however, are given to take advantage of any popular excitement to make trouble, and they may perhaps try to incite the city workmen to rioting.

The police will attempt to prevent any speecaking on the streets, and a large force of military will be held in readiness to aid them if it is required.

Considerable excitement, not unaccompanied with indignation against the police, has been caused at Dijon, capital of the Department of Cote d'Or, by an attempt that was made to blow up the Town Hall.

It is considered to be a remarkable state of affairs when Anarchists can approach a supposed-to-be carefully guarded public building, arrange their explosives, set the fuses on fire and then make their escape without being seen by the guards at any part of the proceedings.

Many critics of the police say that after so many attempts have been made in various places to blow up police barracks, notably the Lobau Barracks in Paris and the barracks at Cligny, the instinct of self-preservation should impel the gendarmes doing guard at public buildings to keep a careful watch to prevent themselves and the buildings which they are guarding from being blown up.

The inhabitants of Dijon give free voice to their indignation, and it is thought hereafter a much closer watch will be kept upon strangers about the Town Hall and all the other public buildings.

Fortunately the explosion did little damage and nobody was injured, but the people of the town believe that this was in no measure due to the police.

All Demonstrations Forbidden.

DUBLIN, April 30.—In Bohem, the centre of Germany's coal and iron production, the police have forbidden all demonstrations on May Day. It was feared that the prevalent discontent in the mining region might be increased to violence in case the Anarchist and Socialist agitators, who have gone to Bohem from this city, were allowed to speak before large public meetings.

The Tynehead to Sail Monday.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The Washington ship Tynehead will sail from Dow's storehouse, Brooklyn, Monday morning, for Russia, with the cargo of grain and other food products contributed by the people of Iowa. A party representing Iowa and the District of Columbia will witness the sailing of the vessel. The ship will be elaborately decorated with bunting, the American, Russian and Red Cross flags being most largely used. The destination of the ship will be Riga, Russia, although she will first touch at St. Petersburg. The cargo will be unloaded at Riga.

Will Not be Named Before Election.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The United States Supreme Court has closed its docket and decided to hear no further arguments during the remainder of the present term, which ends May 16. The impression has prevailed that the President would appoint the successor of the late Justice Bradley before the term closed, but this opinion is now changed and the understanding is that no selection will be announced until after the Presidential election. The place is generally conceded to Attorney General Miller.

Adirondack Railroad Outrages Again.

CINCINNATI, April 30.—An application was made yesterday to the Mayor by two negroes who wanted transportation to Birmingham, Ala. The negroes said they had been working on a railroad in the Adirondacks in New York, and had received horrible treatment. They had managed to escape the armed guards. One of the men had the great toe on both feet frozen, and it is believed both legs will have to be amputated to save his life.

Mrs. Deacon Has Left France.

PARIS, April 30.—Mrs. Deacon, wife of Edward Parker Deacon, who killed M. Abille in the Hotel Epinette, Cannes, has left France, in order, it is understood, to avoid giving testimony at the trial of her husband on May 20th. Mr. Deacon, who is at liberty on bail, will have to surrender to the authorities five days before the day set for the trial.

WHOM DID HE FIGHT?

Different Stories Regarding Milbank's Latest.

HE SAYS IT WAS NOT DE MORNY

Positively Asserted, However, that Harry Vane and the Duc Had a Quarrel.

Another Report is that Milbank Had a Flat Fight in Brussels with an Unknown Frenchman Who Had Sneered at England and Englishmen—Whoever Milbank's Antagonist Was, He is Dangerously Wounded.

LONDON, April 30.—The duel fought by Harry Vane Milbank at Ostend Thursday has no connection with the Borrowe-Drayton affair. Milbank's opponent was not the Duc de Morny, as has been reported. The Duc de Morny, who returned to Brussels immediately after the duel last evening, informed a reporter at the Grand Hotel that he was under a promise not to give the name of his opponent or his second, but stated that he has not seen De Morny since his (Milbank's) return from America, and that he had not had any communication with him.

A reporter also saw the Duc de Morny in Paris, apparently not suffering from any recent wound. De Morny said that he had not fought with Milbank and did not apprehend a hostile meeting with him.

The duel was brought about by causes that have no connection with the Borrowe-Drayton affair. After the meeting between Fox and Borrowe at Nieuport, on Saturday, Milbank went to Brussels, the others going on from Ostend to London, and put up at the Grand Hotel. On Monday he dined in the hotel cafe. The next day he was in the hotel near his table sat two Frenchmen at another table who spent most of their time during dinner making insulting remarks about Englishmen, which were obviously intended for Milbank's ears. He paid no attention to them until they came out of the cafe, when he met them in the courtyard of the hotel and slapped the face of one of them.

The result was a challenge and a meeting of the two at Nieuport on the identical spot where Fox and Borrowe exchanged shots last Saturday. The conditions were the same as on that occasion. There were also two shots at twelve paces. Milbank shot his opponent through the top of the first fire, and he was carried across to a yacht owned by a friend that lay off the coast, accompanied by his surgeon and second.

Milbank and his second, De l'Estrange and Tournier, Belgian gentlemen, returned at once to Brussels. It is not known how seriously the wounded man is injured, as no report has been received as yet from the yacht, which sailed toward the French coast. The surgeon feared, however, after his first inspection of the wound, that it was very dangerous.

BRUSSELS, April 30.—Harry Vane Milbank was seen at the Grand Hotel just before his departure for London, but refused at first to be interviewed concerning his latest duel. He eventually admitted that he had fought, although he denied that his antagonist was the Duc de Morny. He would not give the details of the duel.

Despite Mr. Milbank's denial there are a dozen persons in the Grand Hotel who say positively that the quarrel in the restaurant was between Milbank and De Morny, and that they were the principals in the duel. The landlord of the Grand asserts that he witnessed part of the quarrel and knows that De Morny was Milbank's adversary.

The contradictory reports are due, the restaurant people say, to the fact that on Tuesday Milbank had a flat fight with an unknown Frenchman. The latter sneered at England and said that Englishmen had no proper idea of honor. Thereupon Milbank struck him on the nose. The Frenchman raised his arm, but Milbank hit him a blow on the neck and knocked him down. Cards were exchanged, but nobody seems to have heard more of the affair. It is rumored, however, that the Frenchman was Aurelien Scholl, the Duc de Morny's comrade on the court of honor.

The trouble between Harry Vane Milbank and the Duc de Morny dates from the publishing of the correspondence in the notorious Drayton-Borrowe dueling affair.

One of the letters written by Milbank and Fox, Borrowe's second, to J. Coleman Drayton, dated Feb. 17, 1892, informing Drayton that they should decide to permit their principal to meet him upon the field of honor, stated that the case had been submitted to M. Aurelien Scholl and the Duc de Morny, two of the best known authorities in France on the Code d'Honneur, and that they had decided that Mr. Drayton was not entitled to claim the satisfaction of a gentleman.

After the fire-eaters arrived in New York on the Majestic, it was learned by Milbank that the Duc de Morny had given out for publication the letter that he (Milbank) had sent to the Duc submitting the facts in the case without mentioning names, but which contained statements extremely compromising to the woman in the case, who was Mrs. Drayton.

When Milbank saw this he was very angry, and declared that the Duke had violated a sacred trust in giving out the letter, and besides that, he had been guilty of garbling the letter, making Milbank say things which he denied that he had ever written.

"I still demand an explanation from the Duke for allowing that letter to go out," said Milbank. "It was a private letter from one gentleman to another, and he had no right to show it to anyone without asking my permission."

There was some cable correspondence between the Duke and Milbank before the latter sailed for Europe, but it was not satisfactory to the Englishman, and when he went away he vowed that he would make it warm for De Morny when he reached Paris.

Since that time, and up to the present, nothing has been heard of this episode of the Drayton-Borrowe affair.
