SCENES AT THE CIRCUS GROUNDS.

FOREPAUGH'S TENTS AT THE TROTTER PARK.

A STUPENDOUS AGGREGATION.

Scores of Passenger, Stock and Flat Railway Cars Fill the Railroad Siding—A Sunday Off in Town.

The circus is here and the small boys, the old boys, the girls, young ladies, and their mothers are reveling in a spasm of delight. Adam Forepaugh's Shows arrived in town at about eight o'clock yesterday morning, having left Shamokin immediately after the close of the performance there last night. The Telegram announced that the shows would Sunday at Ashland, but they did not. They came direct to this town and before noon the tops of the scores of white canvas tents peeped above the high dirt banks of the Indian Ridge and Shenandoah City collieries.

People flocked to the grounds from town by the hundreds all day yesterday and gazed in wonderment upon the colossal amusement plant.

The shows may justly lay claim to be the "greatest on earth." The immense strings of brilliantly decorated cars, the innumerable mammoth tents, the hundreds of closed and open wagons, hundreds of chariots and other fantastic vehicles present a sight beyond all expectations.

It is really wonderful. But aside from the immense quantity of property the shows carry look at the army of men. Five hundred men of all-work alone! A HERALD reporter visited the grounds yesterday in time to witness the preparations for dinner. A short distance from the immense tents used for dining purpose a score of immense cauldrons were suspended above huge piles of burning logs. Over a hundred men fitted to and fro like bees preparing the meals for the thousand or more performers and others who rolled about the grounds or reclined upon impromptu couches in the tents awaiting the ringing of the dinner bell. In comes men with several bushel bags full of potatoes. Into the cauldrons they go. Now comes the coffee, followed by bucket after bucket of milk. Enough for thousands one would think, but none too much for the army of people that must be kept for Forepaugh's Shows. The dinner bell rings. A small boy runs here and there, ringing it. Everybody is notified. Then the circus people stream towards the dining tents. A wonderful sight. Women in fine and plain clothes, prosperous male performers and animal keepers follow, and close upon their heels are Moors, the Kybales and Assassins. A peep into the dining tent forms the climax. What a gathering to feed! What a stupendous affair is the traveling circus!

dragon car, the immense globe surmounted by the "Goddess of Liberty," Roman chariots, vehicles carrying Japan seed warfs, Turks, clowns and other individuals, cages of wild animals, cages of animals with trainers sitting in their midst, herds of gigantic elephants, droves of camels and dromedaries, and the callopo wagon. The "fake" farmer was an amusing incident. The "farmer" was a perfect counterpart of the regular "hayseeder" and sat in a wagon drawn by a worn out and badly fed steed. When the driver saw a policeman he would drive in a zigzag fashion that threatened to mar the parade and when a "ficer" interfered the "farmer" would wink knowingly and pull back into line to await another opportunity to "work" on some uninitiated.

The people are warned to be on their guard while the circus remains in town. Fakirs and crooks are on hand in hundreds and too strict a watch cannot be kept. The managers of the shows have two detectives who will aid Chief Burgess Smith and Chief of Police Davis to spot the suspicious characters and make their arrests possible.

If any families leave their homes without occupants they should see that all windows and doors are securely locked, and at all times a watch should be kept for sneaks.

In contrast with the action of the Pottsville authorities, Chief Burgess Smith says he will grant a license to no fakir, but will arrest any caught plying their vocation.

Business people are warned against the "flim-flam" game. At least half a dozen saloon keepers on Main street were duped Saturday night. An attempt was also made to work it at the post office, but it failed. This game is an intricate one and many have fallen into it when they supposed their eyes were wide open. One Main street saloonkeeper who explained the game to some friends one night last week was bitten Saturday night, so too much vigilance cannot be exercised.

The Forepaugh shows as seen when they were last here are retained. There has been introduced so many distinctive novelties, however, as to make them of paramount interest. Among them is a genuine Moorish Circus Co., comprising thirty-five men, women and children, brought direct to America by special permission of the Sultan and French governments. Another is the famous double revolving trapeze act, performed by the world-famous Vaidia Sisters. The greatest of them is The Fall of Nineveh, a sublime, Biblical spectacle produced by Rettig, the famous originator of that form of entertainment, and whose Fall of Babylon, Rome Under Nero, and other spectacular productions at permanent locations are so well known. The Fall of Nineveh surpasses all the others in its grandeur and magnificence, despite the fact that it will have to be transported almost daily from one city to another. It is unquestionably the most brilliant display of spectacular splendors ever witnessed in any country and time, and its production is the crowning glory of the triumphant career of the Adam Forepaugh Shows during the past 20 years.

Edwin Kennard died at his residence on West Lloyd street Saturday night. He had been ailing for some time, but his death was quite unexpected. He was a member of Anthracite Castle, No. 74, K. G. E., and the Welsh Lodge of Ivories.

SUNDAY SERMON ON TEMPERANCE.

"INSIDIOUSNESS AND PROGRESSIVENESS OF SIN."

THE THEME WAS ABLY HANDLED

Dr. Whitney, of Washington, D. C., Occupied the Pulpit in the Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday Morning.

THE METHODIST Episcopal church, on Sunday evening, was well filled with people to hear Dr. Whitney, of Washington, D. C., who delivered a telling sermon on "The Insidiousness and Progressiveness of Sin."

He is a very interesting speaker and held the undivided attention of the congregation for an hour and a half. His text was from the first Psalm, and after some introductory remarks he dwelt upon the evils of the drink traffic. Its disastrous effects upon the individual, the family, the church, the courts, and society at large were considered. To keep up the army of drunkards requires one boy to every five families. We complain of hard times and congratulate ourselves on the reduction of our taxes and forget that it costs society $6 to protect itself against the evils of the traffic for every $1 that society receives from it—to say nothing of the incurable evils that remain. The worst form in which the evils appears is to be seen in fashionable life and gilded saloons. It is not the drinking habits of the dregs of society that we have to fear, so much as those of the scum. Your boys will not stoop to the ground and crawl into a hole to drink but the fashionable vestibules of hell that are furnished with all that appeals to the ethereal nature may allure them. There is no danger of them being tempted by the bear-eyed sot, but when the glass is extended by the dainty hand of the votary of fashion they are in danger. The devil is not hard to resist when he appears as a devil, but when he stalks forth as an angel of light the very elect are liable to be deceived. If for the first time one should propose to start the saloon business and it was announced before hand that it would impoverish its victims, deplete their reason, desolate their homes, buy up our legislatures, corrupt our courts, defy our laws, mortgage our posterity, the whole community would rise in majestic indignation and say "stop or die on the spot." But because it has risen to such bad prominence by slow degrees and imposed its slavery upon us a little at a time we submit. He was glad to find a general awakening upon the subject all along the line. The Methodist Episcopal church he had stood in advance of any other ecclesiastical body in its official declarations upon this question. He also paid a high compliment to the Roman Catholic church for the progress it is making towards prohibition. He had attended gatherings in the interests of temperance in which from the same platform Roman Catholic and Protestant prelates together with that "unconquered queen of America, Frances E. Willard," had poured forth streams of eloquence against the saloon and in favor of their overthrow. He closed his eloquent discourse with an earnest appeal to all to abstain from all that can intoxicate, and especially to young ladies to raise the standard of morality and sobriety in young men by receiving attentions from no young man who tampers with the intoxicating bowl. They would not marry you if you drank, why should you marry them if they drink?
