AN OCEAN MONSTER.
Picture of an Ugly Creature Caught Near San Francisco.
Some Say It is a Fish, Others Vow That It is a Genuine Case of Serpent—Ideas Entertained by a Learned Professor.

Oakland has a something for which everybody is trying to find a name, says the San Francisco Chronicle. Some call it a fish and others class it with the serpents. As it was caught in the bay the fish theorists maintain that their position is correct, but the contrary minded point to the barrel-shaped body and the hideous head of the something in support of their belief that it is a snake, and an ugly one at that. The contention was suspended for awhile and the queer thing without a name was taken to the university at Berkeley, but even the learned professors of that classic retreat gave up guessing at it. At all events it is the queerest looking monster ever captured in the bay of San Francisco.

Some people claim that the Atlantic seaside hotel-keepers have permitted the one, only and original sea serpent to get away from them, and there is something about the monster that bears them out. From the tip of its ugly nose to the end of its equally ugly tail the body is five and one-half feet long. It is round in shape and the body tapers from the head to a fine point at the tail. The captors state that it wriggled very snakishly through the water. The thing has fins just like any well-constructed fish. The head of the monster is enough to scare a delirious tremens patient into an insane asylum. It is a very large head, shaped like a sealion's, with huge staring round eyes, two small ears that lie close to the head and a very large mouth armed with two rows of formidable looking fangs and a forked tongue. The tongue, the captors aver, darted serpentine in and out of the mouth when the thing was alive. The head has patches of black silky hair scattered over it.

A son of William Reuter and a friend were the captors. They were fishing off the north side of Goat Island when they noticed the monster wriggling in the water. The boat's painter was speedily converted into a lariat, and when the fish-snake poked its hideous head above the water it was made prisoner. The young men had a hard fight with the monster, but they finally landed it in the boat and conveyed it to Oakland, where it has been on exhibition in front of Reuter's dye works on Washington street.

The monster weighs 18½ pounds. Later a telegram from Oakland stated that a Berkeley professor who had been studying all day and far into the darkness over the matter had found out what the something was and triumphantly pronounced its name.

The professor's designation of the snakefish is anarrhichthys ocellatus—at least that is the telegraph operator's version of it.

At all events it is a very queer fish, and it is found only in the Pacific ocean and the arms thereof.

Odd Place for a Snake.
Mr. Edward Jones, who resides at Alexandria, Va., was chopping some oak wood one evening when he came across a piece that was very hard to split. He worked at it till it came apart, but was dumfounded when he found a snake in the center of the tough piece, rolled up in a ball, with no means of ingress or egress. The wood had grown around the reptile to the thickness of 9 inches on all sides, proving conclusively that he must have been there for many years. Some who viewed the stick and the smooth cavity where his snakeship had lain calculated that not less than a hundred years had elapsed since he took up his abode where he was found. The most curious part of the story is that the snake was not hard, dry or petrified; on the contrary, he was as flexible as any snake would be rolled up in winter quarters. Mr. Jones had several handsome offers for either the snake or the split stick showing his abode, but all offers were promptly refused.

Civilization Does It.
Portland, Ore., used to be quite a center for collecting furs, but year by year, as the country is settled up, the fur-bearing animals grow more scarce and the amount of furs marketed there becomes less.

An Iowa Freak.

PRINTERS' HOME DEDICATED.

Exercises at the Opening of the Childs-Drexel Institution at Colorado Springs.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., May 13.—Twenty thousand men and women, representing the Union printers and the newspaper writers of more than half of the commonwealth of the Union as well as all the diversified business interests of the Centennial State, assembled on a broad plateau on the foothills of the Rocky Mountain range yesterday and participated in the exercises that dedicated the magnificent structure that is henceforth to afford an asylum to the aged and the infirm of the typographical fraternity.

The weather was in harmony with the day and event, and nothing seemed to mar the programme that had been prepared.

Early special trains brought thousands of visitors from Denver, Pueblo, Leadville, Creede and other points.

The event of the day was preceded by a parade, which formed on Pike's Peak avenue in two divisions with Col. L. C. Dana as chief marshal.

In the first division were the typographical unions of Denver, Pueblo, Creede, Leadville and Colorado Springs, headed by the Cowboy Band of Pueblo, and the carpenters, stonecutters, painters, plumbers and other trades' unions.

In the second division the Chaffee Light Artillery acted as escort to Mr. and Mrs. Childs and party, and the State and County officials with the visiting delegates of the National Editorial Association and the Women members of the Typographical Union were also in line.

Upon the arrival at the Rio Grande depot of Gov. Rountt escorted by Company A National Guards, the order was given for the head of the line to move. The sidewalk from the Antlers Hotel to the foot of the hill were crowded, and the philanthropic publisher from the Quaker City received an ovation from blocks to block.

Prayer by Rev. Dr. James B. Gregg inaugurated the formal exercises which took place in the open air in front of the home.

Commencing at ten o'clock, addresses of welcome were delivered in behalf of the State by Gov. John L. Rountt, in behalf of the citizens by Mayor Ira G. Sprague, and for the business community of Colorado by Hon. H. G. Lunt, President of the Chamber of Commerce.

When Mr. Childs arose to reply the enthusiasm of the assemblage reached a climax. The immense gathering got upon its feet and cheered and shouted and yelled until the din was deafening. When the men had gotten through, the women had their turn and while their voices rent the air they waved handkerchiefs and flags and badges galore.

Visibly affected by the warmth and sincerity of the greeting, Mr. Childs made his first speech since his departure from the Quaker City. His remarks were loudly applauded.

There was a renewal of the previous enthusiasm as the speaker concluded. Then after brief remarks from Vice-President McKenna, of the International Typographical Union, and the reading of the poem composed by Eugene Munty, the printer-post of Philadelphia, United States Senator J. H. Gallinger, of New Hampshire, who was greeted with prolonged applause, was presented and delivered the oration of the day.

Brief remarks followed from W. S. Cappeller, of Mansfield, O., president of the National Editorial Association, several hundred members of which organization were massed around the speaker's stand, and with the pronouncing of the benediction the exercises came to an end.

The visitors were subsequently entertained at luncheon by the citizens' committee.

CHICAGO WORKMEN TO STRIKE.

Mechanics Employed on the World's Fair Buildings Much Disgruntled.

CHICAGO, May 13.—A general strike on the World's Fair buildings seems inevitable. The particular grievance of the men is that the contractors have imported large numbers of men, many of whom, having been found wholly incompetent to do the work expected of them, have been turned loose in the city to seek work.

The men also claim that this is in violation of the spirit of the agreement which was made by the representatives of the unions with the local directory of the exposition. A strike of all the union men would take nine-tenths of the workmen out and paralyze business at the grounds. The question will be decided at a meeting of the building trades council to-night. It is almost a foregone conclusion that a strike will be declared.

Indians Threaten Trouble.

GUTHRIE, O. T., May 13.—Gov. Seay has received dispatches from the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservations stating that 100 Cheyennes were off their allotment and were driving white settlers off their lands, and that if the white settlers do not leave the country inside of 10 days they will be driven out.

The Indians are all armed. At the town of Cheyenne a line of guards surround the town day and night, and the citizens request that troops be sent off once for protection.

Confirmed by the Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—During a secret session of less than five minutes the Senate confirmed the nomination of T. Jefferson Coolidge of Massachusetts, to be Minister to France. There was no opposition, and the confirmation was made by a viva voce vote. The nomination of Captain Richard W. Meade to be a commodore in the navy was also confirmed.

Poison in the Cream.

RANDOLPH, N. Y., May 13.—In Chamberlain Institute after breakfast Prof. Davis, Prof. Penrose, two students and two servants became very ill from poison, which is supposed to have been in the cream, as those who drank no coffee were not affected. All are improving except Prof. Davis. An analysis of the cream will be made.

Union Pacific Business Good.

BOSTON, May 13.—President S. H. H. Clark, of the Union Pacific, has been here for two days. From the officials of the company it is learned that Mr. Clark finds business gradually improving throughout all the section traversed by the company, and he feels much encouraged and believes that the present year will make a better showing than last year.
