Guaranteed Cure.

We authorize our advertised druggist to sell Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, Coughs and Colds, upon this condition. If you are afflicted with a Cough, Cold or any Lung, Throat or Chest trouble, and will use this remedy as directed, giving it a fair trial, and experience no benefit, you may return the bottle and have your money refunded. We could not make this offer did we not know that Dr. King's New Discovery could be relied on. It never disappoints. Trial bottles free at C. H. Hagenbuch's drug store. Large size 50c. per bottle. Sold by C. H. Hagenbuch.

Sociable.

The ladies of the Trinity Reformed church will hold a sociable in the church to-night.

A Leader.

Since its first introduction, Electric Bitters has gained rapidly in popular favor, until now it is clearly in the lead among pure medicinal tonics and alternatives—containing nothing which permits its use as a beverage or intoxicant. It is recognized as the best and purest medicine for all ailments of Stomach, Liver or Kidneys. It will cure Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, and drive Malaria from the system. Satisfaction guaranteed with each bottle or the money will be refunded. Price only 50c. per bottle. Sold by C. H. Hagenbuch.

YOUR ATTENTION, PLEASE!

THE LATE COL. STAHL.

What a Correspondent Says of the Veteran Journalist.

A writer to the Sunbury Daily writes as follows of the late Col. Henry J. Stahl, the veteran editor of the Gettysburg Compiler, and who was one of the leading members of the Pennsylvania Editorial Association:

When the Pennsylvania delegation is reached in roll call at the National Convention of editors at San Francisco next week there will come no response when the Secretary cries Henry J. Stahl and a wave of sadness will sweep over the boys from the Keystone State. Col. Stahl, who was the editor of the Gettysburg Compiler, is dead, died in the harness at the age of 69 years, when his fellow editors were speeding toward the west, and with his going there is lost to the ranks of Pennsylvania journalism a picturesque figure of the old school, a kind, courteous, learned old gentleman. I first met the Colonel at Harrisburg four years ago and afterward jaunted with him into the southland and learned to like the genial old editor. He was one of the oldest members of the Pennsylvania association and was one of the delegates to the present Convention.

There are a couple stories about the old Colonel that may prove interesting and that come fresh to my mind at this time. He lived in Gettysburg at the time of the great struggle in '63 and in the first day's fight the tide of battle ebbed and flowed past the Colonel's door; as first the gray and then the blue line had a momentary advantage. In one of the dashes forward a Colonel in the Iron brigade of Indiana went down just at the old editor's gate. The Union forces, determined to carry their wounded officers back with them, fought like demons over the spot and as determinedly the line of gray pressed them back. It was at this juncture that the Chambersburg editor acted. Hurrying out into the street he reached the wounded man and dragged him into his home. Here he was, with the assistance of Stahl's daughters, nursed back to life, and he and Col. Stahl became warm friends. The rescued man was Col. Dudley, of Indiana, who afterward became famous with "blocks of fire." It was after the Harrison campaign that Stahl met Dudley in Washington and going up to the gentleman he said, "Look here, Dudley, if I had known you were going to turn out so mean I wouldn't have saved you."

I think I can safely say that Col. Stahl was the only man in Pennsylvania that ever refused a seat in Congress, but he did it. The nomination had gone around and both Franklin and York counties had been represented by a Democratic Congressman. It was now the turn of Adams county to send a Jeffersonian advocate and a lawyer was nominated. It is impossible to tell just what the matter was, but it is likely that the lawyer did not want to go to Washington, as the nomination was equivalent to an election, so he just died and left the party a few days before the election without a candidate. It was at this juncture that the politicians met in Gettysburg and decided to nominate Stahl. It was done and a committee went down to the office to tell the old man. He was fuming around with a hickory shirt and a pipe on, and when the spokesman said, "Col., we have nominated you for Congress," he looked over his glasses and replied, "Have, have you? Well I'll have to see about that." "But, Colonel, you ought to take it." The old gentleman looked up and said, "Now look here, I'll see mam about it and tell you after dinner," and he went home. "Mam," said the Colonel, "they have nominated me for Congress." "Well, Colonel, you can't go." "Now, mam, why not?" "Well, you have a nice office here, with a comfortable living, and if you go down there they will bring you home in a box. You can't go and that settles it."

The Colonel returned to the office and met the committee. "Gentlemen," said he, "I won't go." "Why not, Col.?" "Well, mam says I shan't go and that settles it," and the man who had a seat in Congress in his hands turned around to his desk.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

A Strange Story.

Round the neck of the holy virgin of Almudena, the patron saint of Madrid, for whom a fine new church is being built close to the royal palace, a very beautiful diamond ring hangs on a thin gold chain. The ring belonged to the late King Alfonso XII., and a strange history is connected with it, which may well appeal to the minds of the superstitious Spaniards. On the day of his wedding to Mercedes, the daughter of the duke of Montpensier, the king gave the ring to his bride, who wore it till her early death. After the funeral the king gave the ring to his grandmother, Queen Christina, who died soon after. Infanta Maria del Pilar, the sister of the king, then became its possessor. She had worn it only a few days when she died. Then the ring became the property of the king once more, and he gave it to the sister of his late consort, Princess Christina, the youngest daughter of the duke of Montpensier. Three months later the young girl was dead. The king had now become aware of the unfortunate coincidences, and instead of giving it away again he himself wore the ring until he also went to his early grave.

—Snow Cake.—Half cup of butter, one of sugar, one and a half of flour, half a cup of sweet milk, whites of four eggs, one teaspoonful baking powder; flavor with lemon.

Trap-Doors Under the Seats.

Some ingenious and some idiotic devices to insure the safety of an audience in case of fire have been lately projected. One is to have a trap-door arranged under each seat in the theater, so that by simply pressing a button the occupant is gently lowered into a comfortable and fire-proof vault below the floor, and where, presumably, the frightened and half-fainting person is treated to a drink and a schweizer sandwich, says the Stage. This idea comes from Paris, and is open to one objection. What are the poor gallery people going to do? They would be apt to break their necks if put through a hole in the floor, and it would prove rather an expensive arrangement to provide everybody who bought a balcony or a gallery seat with a special elevator.

—No Idle Theorist.—Mr. Figg—"What keep you up so late?" Tommy—"Fire drill." "Fire drill!" "M'm. We perpend like the house was afire and then march out like soldiers. Me'n Johnny Briggs is goin' to set the house truly afire some time and then we'll see how it works. I'll bet some o' them dude kids 'll jist fall all over themselves, don't you, paw?"—Indianapolis Journal.
