SOFT-SOAPED THE OFFICERS. How Buncour O'Brien Managed to Escap

at Havre. Panis, May 25.—It appears that, by instructions from Washington, the Secretary of the British Legation addressed to the French authorities a request for the arrest of O'Brien on the arrival of the Marseille from New Orleans.

After arresting O'Brien, and when they had him in safe custody, the Havre po-lice compiled with his request to be al-lowed to take a walk about the city guarded by two gendarmes.

O'Brien looked so meek and submissive, and at the same time apparently so desirous of causing as little trouble as possible, that the police thought there would be no danger.

So the gendarmes were told to take him around and show him the sights, but not to let him beyond arms length, and to use their weapons promptly should he try to escape. The gendarmes have hardly sufficiently recovered yet to tell oxactly how it happened.

O'Brien could speak hardly any French, but it seems he won their good will by admiring everything he saw, and uttering exclamations of delight over France and French.

The women were all handsome, the soldiers all brave, the police were fine, so he exclaimed, and he won their hearts completely when he declared with a completely when he declared with a shrug of disgnst that the Germans were all "cochons" (pigs).

When O'Brien, therefore, wanted to rest in a cafe, the gendarmes were cor-dially willing, and they were also will-ing to share the wine for which he paid liberalls.

When O'Brien had occasion to retire for a few moments they were too polite, if not too comatose, to watch him closely, and they were very much surprised when the admirer of France failed to return. He has not made his appearance again, although his late guardians profess great anxiety to see him. The authorities are not satisfied with the circumstances of the ascape, and a rigid inquiry has been insti-tuted.

London, May 25.—The police have positive information that O'Brien started for England on the steamer Ebre, and they believe that he must have cluded Inspector Roberts and Sargeant Now-land, who boarded the Ebre off Gravesend to arrest him. The police are searching London. Inspector Frank Forest, who previously arrested O'Brien, has gone back to France, believing that O'Brien has gone or is going to Beau-deaux, with the intention of sailing for South America.

MORE RAIN COMING.

The Weather Predictions Fill Dwellers in the Mississippi Valley With Dread,

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 25. - Pemiscot county is a scene of desolation. Threefourths of the county is now under water, and assistance is urgently needed at several points in the county between Reel Foot Lake and Paraguid, on the Arkansas side. Three families have also been drowned.

Large numbers of horses, mules and cattle have been drowned.

It is said there are 225,000 acres of wheat destroyed, 800,000 acres of corn ruined and nearly 200,000 acres of cot-ton inundated. The waters continue to rise. The Arkansas bottoms are all under water and the number of lives lost and amount of property destroyed can-not be estimated, because no boats have gone into the flooded districts,

The United States weather observers' indication of more rain falling over the Missouri and upper Mississippi valleys continues to fill the people of the sub-merged region with dread, especially as it is asserted that the Ohio, Cumberland, Tennessee, Wabash, Red and Mississippi rivers will continue to rise. Along the Arkansas, Missouri and Savannah river valleys there is a prospect that waters will fall, although the gauge is still

Which will be destroyed.

Guards have been put on the Tensas front in Madison parish day and night, as it is foared levees will be cut. The river is bank full, and a break is momentarily expected on the west bank between New Orleans and Donaldson-ville. The Mississippi valley system is again flooded out, and cannot reach the city on account of Tessler breaks.
