"Hamlet," Last Night.

The production of Shakespeare's masterpiece "Hamlet," at Ferguson's theatre, drew a large and appreciative audience. Mr. Clarence Bennett impersonated Hamlet in a very effective manner. His conception of the character embraces all the characteristics of a clean-cut and impressive representation, and at all times he retained perfect control of the part. His entire company showed close and careful stage management and did clever conscientious work. The costumes were elegant and correct, the special scenery fine and the little details carefully attended to. The audience testified their appreciation by repeated curtain calls to which Mr. Bennett responded. To-night the company present a very bright comedy entitled "Daisy," with elegant special scenery. To-night's play closes the season at the theatre until next September. Everyone should embrace this occasion to see the last and brightest play of this excellent company, especially as it is their last chance to see any theatrical performance here again this season.

There is some talk of prosecuting the trespassers.
