WILL THE "SUN" EAT CROW? As Grover Cleveland will be the Democratic nominee for the Presidency, the following, which is dedicated to the News, will not come amiss at this time:

"The Rev. Dr. McArthur calls Dr. Rainsford's scheme for religious grog shops a product of the 'silly season,' There may be a reason for this opinion, but this is by no means a silly вевноп.

"It ought to be a very grave, a very important, a very interesting season, in 1858. He is good for another one and so remain from this time forth in 1892 If he gets a chance. Drop a until November is here. The whole Cleveland ticket into the box and population of the town are engaged in draw out a Force bill. This word is the highest and most exciting of all discussions, the discussion of their duty as citizens charged with the responsibility of determining the policy of the Federal Government. They have, for a time at least, brushed away the chaff and the dust of sensational preachers, and are now setting themselves to their rerious task as poli-

"The policy of the Federal Government for the four years from the 4th of next March will be determined by the people of this city of New York. They will decide whether the successor of Benjamin Harrison in the White House is to be Harrison himself or a Democrat tried and true. Here in New York the great battle is to be fought and won or lost. According to all probabilities, as the State of New York goes so will go the Union; and incontestaby the vote of this city will settle the question whether the electoral votes of the state shall be cast for a Democrat or for Benjamin Harrison for President. The centre of the great Democratic line will be held by the Democracy of New York, and the brunt of the fighting must fall upon the Democrats of this city.

"This, then, cannot be called a silly season. It is a season of momentous importance. It may be a silly season however, if the strength of the New York Democracy is destroyed at Chicago and its veteran ranks are deprived of Democratic leadership. It will be a silly season if it be a season of Mugwump campaigning; it will be a silly season here, and for the Democracy everywhere. When an army goes forth to battle it must have something to fight for. It must have captains in whom it has confidence and under whose leadership it marches to a definite end. It must be able to rally around its own colors, stained and riddled in many a past conflict, the glorious symbols of its cause and its principles, and not a patch work of many flags, against which it has battled in times past.

"Give the Democracy of New York a genuine Democrat for a leader, and the to send Sc. to pay heating on our beat over 19th Market School and the toward 19th Address V. H. CADY, 50 High St., Prov

Evening Herald. Republican enemy will not be able to coming contest. It will force the fighting all along the line, and its victories of the past will be trifling successes as compared with the triumph it will win in November. The election will be carried not by fifty thousand or sixty thousand, but by one hundred thousand majority, and consequently the state and Union will be the prize of the Democracy for ... 1 56 a quarter of a century to come. Turn this splendidly organized and superbly disciplined host over to Mugwump leadership, and the whole falls into disorder. It becomes disheartened. Instead of consolidated and enthusiastic forces there will remain only a confused and straggling force, with raw captains and unfamiliar and uninspiriting cries and watchwords.

"It is to be a glorious season of contest and victory or a silly season of shame fighting and defeat. The New York Democrecy awaits from Chicago the call to battle,"

THE "STUFFED PROPHET."

The following editorial is taken from the ultra Democratic New York Sun and respectfully dedicated to the Shenandosh Sunday News:

"If Grover Cleveland had not broken the pledges and smashed the platform upon which he was elected, there would have been no Billion Congress, no galvanization of the old Republican policy of Force and Fraud, no Elections Committee committing burglary in Democratic Congress districts. Grover Cleveland elected the Republican House of Representatives. Grover Cleveland elected Tom Reed Speaker, and gave a chance to Cannon and his pals to do their dirty work.

"Grover Cleveland cost the Democracy the Presidency and the House of Representatives. Do the Southern Democrats want to foot the bill again? The loss of the Presidency they might stand, but another Republican House of Representatives means another Force bill. Why, indeed, should the Republicans observe any moderation in their treatment of a party which deliberately seeks defeat.

"Grover Cleveland made the South the present of a Republican Congress for the wise or the otherwise."

A VOLCANIC REGION.

stand up against it in the shock of the Forty Square Miles Pierced by Boiling

It is the strangest and most remarkable volcanic region anywhere on the face of the known earth. The locality is in the upper part of Lower, or Baja, California, and is, therefore, in Mexican territory. It is only seventy miles, however, from Yuma, Ariz., and about sixty miles south of the international bound-

The volcanic area is forty miles square in extent, and every square rod of that territory is pierced by either a boiling spring or spouting gerser, shooting up-ward showers of mud and hot water and stones, or else it is dotted by truncated cones -small volcanoes of varying izes, with craters on their tops, in which nolten lava and mud seethe and boil rising and falling with force of the fleres tent of the internal fires. Sometime the steaming mass settles with gurgling ounds until it is plmost lost to sight in the apparently fathomless crater; and again it boils upward and rolls over the edges of the crater, to pour down its sides in steaming streams of mud that force the onlooker to make a hasty flight

All the way over from the Colorado twenty miles to the east, our ears has een assailed by constant rumbling and iolses resembling thunder, excepting that the sounds seemed to come from the ground, and, as at times the earth quivered perceptibly, I attributed these disturbances to earthquakes. We were greatly annoyed, too, by an intense pungent odor of sulphur that at times was almost suffocating. All this came from the land of mud and fire, as I afterward discovered. Not knowing this at the time, however, I was hardly prepared for the sight that burst on my eyes the evening we reached the west end of Lake Pasqualitas. As far as we could see to the west, south and north lay a dense for closely hugging the ground, and from out of which proceeded all those noises we had heard and attributed to an earthquake.

Amid the rumbling we could now also distinguish sounds exactly like those of a thousand pots all boiling at once. was the seething and bubbling of boil-ing water, from which cose the masses of steam that, like fog, covered the ground. Close to our feet, not more than thirty yards distant, we saw a geythe first, lazily overflowing the slightly elevated edge of a sticky-loole ing, black liquid. As we stood there, watching the wonderful panorama that slowly unfolded as a passing gust of wind lifted the fog, we became conscious that the ground under our feet was becoming painfully hot, even through our thick-soled shoes, and we had to shift our position. I also noticed a springs "fell" of the ground as we walked, jus like a marsh, and it echoed our footwith a hollow, metallic-like sound, as though we were walking on a copper cylinder. I remember, too, that a curious sort of horror came over me as I speculated on our probable fate, were the crust of earth suddenly to collapse beneath our weight.

As we retreated before the blast of sulphurous fumes that the wind drove against us the fog continued to lift, until finally we beheld the volcanic area in its entirety. Everywhere were the conical projections of the volcanoes. Everything was in active operation, and the volcanoes belched forth vapor and showers of thin mud or poured plastic streams down their sides, while the numerous springs and geysers were shooting out columns of boiling water, some clear and others thick and muddy, while here and there an occasional hard worker would spout up sand and small stones that fell with clattering sounds on the peculiarly vibratory surface.

We counted upward of 3,500 volcanoes in this region. All of them have the small crater-like opening at the apex. out of which poured steam, smoke, mud and flame, and sometimes small clouds The draft that comes from these openings when the volcanoes are in cruption is so hot that it will ignite cloth and even small pieces of wood and a pot of water suspended over the edge on an iron hook will speedily boll a fact we took advantage of in cooking our coffee. In some of these volcanoes the escaping mud has been formed into the most curious pipes that run down their outer edge, and through which the steam whistles and hisses exactly like an engine "blowing off" steam.

About one-half of the volcanoes are from ten to forty feet wide at the base and run from seven to fifteen feet in width, and all of measureless depth Nearly all these big craters are filled with mud or water, boiling hot, and not a few are filled with molten lava. It is from these latter, we found, that the fumes of sulphurous gases came. These volcanoes are active for the greater part of the time, and great care has to be exercised lest the careless sightseer be overwhelmed by a mass of molten lava or a stream of scalding mud or water that shoots from these craters without warning. One of the party, a lineman named Weeks, was nearly scalded one night for his carelessness in sleeping at the base of one of the volcanoes.

A beautiful sight can be witnessed at night in the vicinity of some of the larger craters which contain molten lava. The reflection from the fire within illumines the whole sky overhead, and as the reflection falls upon the clouds of vapor slowly rising, the result is a brilliant play of prismatic

Almost in the center of the volcani region is, perhaps, the greatest natural wonder on earth. It is a lake apparently of the purest ink, though rathe too thick and sticky for commercial uses. The lake covers many acres of ground, and is one-half mile in length in one direction, and it is very narrow The water-if water it can be called-is about as thick as milk and black as the blackest ink. We were unable to find a bottom. Some of the men took baths in it and declared that the sensation was most delightful and refreshing.

A curious freak of nature exists in this wonderful region. It is a mesquite tree, the only sign of vegetable growth in miles, that is growing right in the heart of an extinct crater.-Denves

HOG VERSUS SNAKE.

A Bloody Battle in Which Both Porker

and Reptile Succumb. A fight out of the usual line took place few nights since at a San Francisco athletic club. There were not many present, nor was the purse large, and the combatants had had very little ring experience. One was a piebald hog be-longing to "Senator" Healy, a south San Francisco resident, and the other was an Arlzona rattlesnake, the prop erty of H. M. Jones, who resides in the same district. The hog's name was Casey, and the snake went by the ap-pellation of Mars. Both are dead now.

The fight was to be to a finish, though none of the spectators thought for a noment that both the contestants would die. The bets were in favor of the hog, for Casey had killed numerons reptiles before, and, in common with other members of his tribe, was looked upon as being proof against their ven-

An inclosed circular ring had been built in the middle of the hall, which somewhat resembled an over-sized dogfighting pit. It was four feet deep by fifteen in diameter. The floor was plentifully strewn with white sand to the depth of two inches, to give the snake a chance to move around to the best advantage.

When the hog and the snake were let loose in the pit the reptile made a dash at the quadruped and buried its fangs under the hog's shoulder. Casey squealed in the fury of agony and des pair, for it was then pretty certain that he was a dead pig. By his dexterity, however, he saved himself until he had virtually won the contest. He made for the snake, but Mars wiggled and twisted to get out of his way and kept him busy chasing around the ring. Finally he caught the reptile and a second later had bitten through its body in ten different places. In five minutes he had devoured the pieces of his foe. While he was killing Mars, Casey kept squenling all the time, and when it was dead he tore its body to pieces. Then the hopelessly injured pig, whose right foreleg was swollen and crippled by his death wound, put his snout to the floor and rooted around, devouring every fragment of his victim. Then he lay down to die. His owner thought by pouring whisky down the hog's throat he could be saved from the effects of the poison. His efforts, however, were unavailing, and at 1:30 the next morning Casey was pork. President Walker gave the victory to the hog, whose owner re-ceived a purse of one hundred dollars and fifty-three dollars gate receipts.
