MINNESOTA MENTION.

What a Townsman Saw in a Great Western City.

In company with Hon. C. N. Brumm, of Minersville, Hon. D. D. Phillips, of Gordon, and Squire J. J. Coyle, of Mahanoy City, the writer and a number of others, while in Minneapolis recently, visited the mammoth flour mills of Pillsbury & Washburn. We were shown through all the departments of the gigantic mills and everything was fully explained. The mill form one of the great attractions of the city and no visitor fails to visit them. Thousands must have visited them during the week the Republican national convention was held. They are five in number and have a capacity of 14,500 barrels per day, or over 4,000,000 barrels per year. To feed these mills requires 20,000,000 bushels of wheat annually. Mill "A" is the eighth wonder of the world. It has the largest capacity of any mill in the world. It consumes 32,000 bushels of wheat per day. Three hundred cars are required every day to take wheat into, and flour and meal out of the five great mills of the company.

Among the finest and most substantial structures of Minneapolis are the Masonic temple, the New York Life Insurance Company's building, Lumberman's Exchange, Library and West House. A magnificent view can be had from the roof of the New York Life Insurance Company's building.

The electric railway system of the city is as near perfection as it can possibly be made and is a mint for the owners.

Among the numerous points of attraction for visitors are Minnehaha Falls, Soldiers' Home, Minnetonka Falls, Lakes Como and Harriet and Fort Snelling.

Schuykill county people are surprised when they visit Minneapolis to find so many well-known former Pennsylvanians residing there. They are all prosperous. They had headquarters at the Lumberman's Exchange to receive the visitors from the Keystone state.

All the lakes are large and beautiful. Minnehaha Falls, aside from their history, are not of much importance. They are very small in comparison with their reputation and disappoint the visitors who have read of them.

The Soldiers' Home is located on a bluff overlooking the Mississippi river. The buildings and grounds are admirable. A dozen or more Pennsylvanians are inmates of the institution.

A visit to the West printing office at St. Paul is another surprise for a stranger. It is a veritable beehive of workmen. In this establishment all the law books of the great west, northwest and the south are printed and bound, but the work is not limited to law printing by any means.

The establishment is complete in every respect and can handle any amount of work in the printing, binding and stereotyping line. A large number of typesetting and distributing machines are used in setting up and distributing the type. Two kinds of machines are used, the Thorne and Mergenthaler, the latter seems to be the best and most economical. The Mergenthaler, or New Linotype machine, is adapted to produce and assemble, ready for use, the so-called "Linotypes," that is to say, type-high bars or slugs each bearing on its edge characters to print a complete line. The machine is controlled by a series of finger-keys representing, like those of the typewriter, the characters to be printed, and as a result of the manipulation of the keys the machine produces and assembles the linotypes ready for immediate use. The speed of composition runs from 3,158 to 9,474 ems an hour, according to the expertness of the operator.

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trascott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dread cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones."—Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at C. H. Hagenbuch's drug store.

HAZARDOUS JOURNEYS.

Experiences of Visitors to the Kaufman Dam.

Dr. Williams and Richard Amour, of town, drove over to the Kaufman dam late last night. Arriving at one end of the breastwork the doctor alighted and left his horse and carriage in charge of the ex-Chief of Police. Dr. Williams was joined by "Bob" Hunt, of Frackville, and the two walked over to the opposite side of the dam, where the water company officials were seated about a fire. As the doctor and Hunt joined the group one of the officials exclaimed, "which way did you come, gentlemen?"

"Over that dam there," answered Williams.

"Well," said Barker, one of the officials, "you did something I would not undertake for any amount of money."

The doctor reflected a moment and then asked, "Well, here I am on this side and Dick and the horse is on the other, now how will I get back?"

Mr. Barker recommended that the doctor and Hunt remain where they were until daylight, when they could see whether it would be safe to recross the breastwork, or take some other course. The doctor looked at his watch and then took a seat, having made up his mind it would be better to wait until daylight than to take chances.

The HERALD reporter and his companion had an experience similar to that of the doctor. They reached the dam by traveling up the side of a narrow gorge. In this case Mr. Barker also recommended a wait until daylight, but as time was precious the reporter and his companion retraced their steps down the gorge, walking double quick and sometimes running with the water rushing down in torrents a short distance to their feet. "Keep your ears open," snored Mr. Barker as the descent was begun "and if you hear anything scramble up into the bush."

As the reporter and companion sprinted out of the gorge on to the turnpike and started for the hill where their horse had been tied they met several carriages.

"Where is that darned dam?" asked a voice.

The carriages contained Pat. King, Charley Reese, P. T. Mellet, Will Grant, T. A. Evans and W. P. Williams.

"It is right above us and this gully will be washed if the dam breaks," the newspaper travelers answered.

"Turn that—horse around quick and let's get back," shouted Pat King in a tone that left no doubt that he wanted no water in his.

The carriages turned remarkably quick and all parties drove back to town upon learning that nothing could be gained by getting nearer the dam.

"I'm near enough to it," said King.

MYSTERY IN A CAVERN.

Does It Contain Booty Secured by Notorious California Bandits?

On the north side of Table mountain and near its top is an opening in the lava that has since early days been known as the "lion's den." It was so named from the fact that for years it was the lair of a band of ferocious California lions that, when this country was largely devoted to sheep raising, made nightly depredations upon the flocks and caused the owners much annoyance and loss. When pursued the animals would seek refuge in this den and no hunter would dare enter it.

The ground about the entrance to it was covered with bones and remnants of sheep and other animals. With the increase of population the lions have gradually disappeared, although as late as last spring two of the animals were seen to enter the cave. Strange to say, no known man has ever penetrated to its fullest depth. The mouth is about four or five feet high and three feet wide, and the opening descends with a sharp incline for about two hundred feet. Further than this it has never been explored.

Now, however, a party of young men have made arrangements to explore it, and, if possible, penetrate to its bottom. That it is of great depth is certain, for one can stand at the opening and heave great stones down the declivity and the sound will gradually die away in the distance. The young men have procured several hundred feet of rope, lanterns, torches and ladders, and will thoroughly explore the cave.

What adds peculiar interest to the expedition and gives zest to the explorers is the well-known fact that in the heyday of his career as a bandit Joaquin Murietta and his band of faithful followers made the recesses of Table mountain their base of operations in this section. From there they would swoop down on the miners, and then, laden with gold dust, retreat to the mountain. Search as they might, the officers could not locate them. It has been supposed by many that perhaps in this same cave was where the famous outlaw secreted himself. It may be, too, that down deep in the bowels of the earth Joaquin hid the greater portion of his ill-gotten, but nevertheless just as potent, wealth.

Our Tropical Fruits.

Some of the revelations of the census will startle a good many people. For instance, there are now more than half a million almond trees actually bearing in the United States; there are hundreds of thousands of bearing cocconut trees; there are more than a quarter of a million olive trees, producing fruit equal to the best Mediterranean varieties. There are more than half a million bearing banana plants, 300,000 bearing lemon trees, 4,000,000 orange trees, and 91,000,000 pineapples. And the value of tropical and semi-tropical fruits grown under the American flag is nearly $20,000,000.
