THE HERALD is issued earlier than usual to-day in order to give our employees an opportunity to celebrate Independence Day.

CARE should be exercised in the use of the large and dangerous cannon crackers. They are apt to do considerable damage.

YOUNG AMERICA is in his glory to-day. The louder the noise, the better they will like it. Be careful, boys, don't go to extremes.

THE Fourth of July, the one day of the year, when the patriotic citizen celebrates to his heart's content. Hurrah! Hurrah! for the American Union.

AMERICANS, native and adopted, the day is yours! Celebrate it in a worthy manner. The glorious Fourth reminds us of the daring deeds of our revolutionary fathers of the many hardships endured by them during that dark struggle for American independence.

REPUBLICAN OPPRESSION. The New York Recorder paints a very nice picture of a victim of Republican oppression when it says:

When ex-Mayor William R. Grace landed on our shores, years ago, from the county of Longford in Ireland, with far more brains in his head than money in his purse, he at once became the victim of Republican oppression. Under the operation of its tariff policy it began to rob him, one of "the many," for the "benefit of the few." It is one of the most outrageous cases of partisan plundering on record, and Mr. Grace went out to Chicago the other day as one of the chiefs of the "Dandelions" to protest against it and nominate his free-trade friend, Grover Cleveland, for the Presidency.

The sympathies of all his adopted countrymen will go out to Mr. Grace. He is to-day one of the very richest Irishmen in the world, but if he had remained at home in the county of Longford, instead of coming under the grinding rule of the Republican party, with its "iniquitous policy" depriving him of the "necessaries of life," his enormous fortune would be at least four times larger. He has scores of ships on the sea trading to every South American port. If it had not been for the Republican "oppression" half the ships of the world would be flying the commercial flag of "Grace & Co." He owns a big slice of Chili and has a blanket mortgage on Peru. Were it not for the "swindling tariff" he would be the sole proprietor of the whole South American continent. Poor Mr. Grace! No wonder he howls with anguish.

That wicked tariff has blasted his towering ambition. He has been twice Mayor of New York, but if the "pestiferous tariff" had not crowded him to the wall he would have had a perpetual lien not only on the Mayoralty but on the United States Senatorship, the chief magistracy of the state and every other office of honor and emolument from which he is not debarred by the Constitution of the United States. No wonder he shrieks for "a tariff for revenue only." That has been the cardinal doctrine of his life. As a victim of "tariff oppression" he is an interesting and instructive study. During more than a generation he has been robbed "to make the rich richer and the poor poorer."

THE SMALL BOY'S FOURTH.

Give him two dollars; Note how he collars Them with a flourish; What hopes he'll cherish Of fun on the Fourth of July. How he will "crowd 'em," Make 'er be louder, If virtue's in powder; What fancies he'll cherish; All peace he's a foe of; With grandiose fill him, A thumb or two more off— Perhaps it may take in an eye, So give him the money, And let him be funny, And hope that the Fourth he'll enjoy. With grandiose fill him, There's nothing will kill him; 'Tis the only American boy. —Golden Days.

AMERICA FIRST.

How the Young Should Observe the Nation's Anniversary.

This is the season when young America celebrates the glorious deeds of the forefathers, when they cut the leading strings that bound them to the old world, and stepped forth with the independence of manhood. It took Rome five hundred years, five centuries of war, intrigue and arrogance, to overstep southern Europe. In a little more than one century, says the Youth's Companion, America has grown to a magnitude, in area and perhaps in population also, equal to that of Rome in its most magnificent days.

"Civis Romanus sum!" was the proudest boast that could fall from the lips of man at the beginning of the Christian era. Is there to-day an American who rates his citizenship in the great republic at a lower value than Roman freedom nineteen hundred years ago?

The day for "spread eagle" brag is long past, but there is no reason why we should hesitate to say, what not we alone but all the people of the world believe, that it is the destiny of this country to become the greatest, the strongest, the wealthiest, the most self supporting, of all the nations of the earth. It is already the greatest self-governing community the world has ever seen.

How can we make it greater? By standing together as Americans. We shall not magnify, but shall belittle ourselves, if we swagger before our neighbors—using bravado for the strong, and insolence in our treatment of the weak. But we should take American views instead of party views, when questions arise between this government and others.

The motto "America against the world" would be a contemptible motto. Yet is it not better to adopt even such a motto than to take the side of the world against America, or to be indifferent when the interests of one's own country are assailed?

The Fourth of July is a good time for us all to resolve that we will be Americans at heart. Not that we will build up our own country on the ruins of others, but that when there is a clashing of interests those of our native land shall have our hearty support.

"We always fry ours in Cottolene."

Our Meat, Fish, Oysters, Saratoga Chips, Eggs, Doughnuts, Vegetables, etc.

Like most other people, our folks formerly used lard for all such purposes. When it disagreed with any of the family (which it often did,) we said it was "too rich." We finally tried and not one of us has had an attack of "richness" since. We further found that, unlike lard, Cottolene had no unpleasant odor when cooking, and lastly Mother's favorite and conservative cooking authority came out and gave it a big recommendation which clinched the matter. So that's why we always fry ours in Cottolene.

OUR NATIONAL ANNIVERSARY. ALL the white stones set by the way down the long vista of the centuries there is none that marks a more important event than that which bears the declaration of our independence. The "divine right of kings" had been the creed that the world had preached with fire and sword for centuries, but from the mountains and valleys of the New World, from humble cabins in the wilderness, from the shores of the inland seas and the banks of mighty rivers the amen of a people who had learned the doctrine of freedom from nature herself ascended, when those brave patriots, our forefathers, made that memorable declaration which caused tyrants to tremble upon their thrones and oppression to grow pale under its gaudy trappings of robe and crown.

The doom of king-craft and priest-craft was then and there pronounced, and in the clear light of the new day, high and holy truths were revealed that had long been hidden under the dust of superstition and error. Democracy had been called the dream of the fanatics, the chimera of the brain of the poet; but one hundred and sixteen years under democracy has shown to Europe that it is the throne that is the simulacrum, and that liberty under law, the law made by the people, is the most perfect form of government the world has ever seen.

The struggle to free ourselves from the grasp of tyranny was bitter and long continued, and there were times when it seemed hopeless. The young nation, weak in numbers and resources, was confronted by an enemy whose wealth was inexhaustible and whose military strength was enormous, and had not God been with the brave men whose watch-word was "Liberty," their cause would have been lost.

The principles they asserted their posterity has proven, and upon every anniversary of our nation's birth the loyal hearts of the people renew their pledge of faith to our national institutions.

Our flag has waved over many a bloody and hard-fought field since the declaration of independence sent a thrill through all Europe; but the wounds are healed, the graves are hidden with flowers, and peace, mild-eyed and beautiful, broods over the land, and plenty pours from her horn the fruits of honest toil, sufficient not only for our own people, but for the starving millions of the old world, who reach out to us hands of piteous appeal.

We have conquered not only human foes, but the desert and the wilderness have been brought under subjection, the hidden treasures of the depths of the earth have been yielded up, and today we have within our land cities that shame the proudest capitals of the world, that in one century have outstripped those whose foundations were laid before Lief Ericsson was born, and were rich and powerful before Columbus dreamed of a world beyond the western sea.

It is fitting, then, on this day of all others, that we should pause to read the history of our past and the prophecy of our future. The eyes of the world are upon us, and we cannot afford to make mistakes, for the future republics of America and Europe will be patterned after ours.

Those who read the signs of the times tell us that monarchy in England is tottering to its fall, that Norway and Sweden, Germany, Italy and even Imperial Russia are striving to break the bonds of their despotism and become free. The United States, France, and even the superstitious ridden tropical republics of Central and South America uphold the standard of freedom, and when the clouds lift but an instant and the portion of humanity that is crushed under the iron heel of despotism catches a glimpse of the sacred banner their hearts thrill with new hope.

There is a point where evolution in government becomes revolution. We reached it one hundred and sixteen years ago. Europe may reach it in our own time, but among all the future republics of the earth our own will forever be preeminent, for it was planted in the virgin soil of a new continent and has been guarded by a people to whom patriotism is a religion above all creeds and loyalty their breath of life.

A COSTLY EXPERIMENT.

The Pasha Repealed Too Much Faith in Human Nature.

When Empress Eugenie visited Cairo in 1869, Napoleon III. presented to Nubar Pasha a valuable watch set with diamonds. This watch he was in the habit of placing before him on the table during the meetings of the council, which were generally held in the evening, says a writer in the National Zeitung. At one of the sittings the electric light suddenly went out. When it was turned on again Nubar's watch had disappeared. The pasha scrutinized the faces of his colleagues one after the other, but not one winced under his gaze. At length he said:

"Gentlemen, the watch that, according to my custom, I had lying here before me, has been removed. The door is locked on the inside, nobody has entered the room in the meantime, and nobody has gone out. I attribute the loss of the watch to a bad joke or a fit of abstraction on the part of one of you gentlemen. I will now turn out the light once more, feeling convinced that when it is turned on again the watch will be found in its usual place."

The light was then put out. When it shone brightly a minute later, not only was the place where the watch had been still vacant, but Nubar's jeweled inlaid, a present from Victor Emmanuel, had also vanished. Nubar Pasha never saw either of these articles more.
