Good for the "Speaker."

Electric cars are a great nuisance in a place. People are so found of riding on them that they are continually crowded, and to get a comfortable seat on them, s person must get on near the starting point or else be left. This has been the case at Allentown, Wilkes-Barre, Shenandosh and other places that are operating them. To avoid the jam nulsance in some of these festival, Ellengowan school house; benefit places, large cars capable of holding more than a hundred people were put on this summer, but that did not remedy it one bit, for they kept crowding the same as ever-Another nuisance connected with electric cars, is, they bring so many people from the outside towns into the cities, who take business places so that the poor clerks have too much to do. #### NATURE'S ANTICS.

Remarkable Phenomena in South ern California.

Unfathomable Fissures in the Earth Created by Internal Convulsions
-A Very Mysterious Region.

A few months ago a small party of prospectors left San Diego for that lib tle known country lying below the Mexican boundary, just west of the Colorado river. This region is supposed to be full of valuable mineral deposits and prolific in natural phenomena.

They spent a couple of weeks on what is known as the Santa Ysabel ranch, some miles northwest of the Cocopah mountains. While there they heard that frequently during several days a heavy rumbling had been heard in the direction of the Cocopaha. Proceeding to Las Juntas, a little settlement made up of a few Indians and a white man or two, they spent several days there in prospecting.

Here they were told by a man named Elliott that from a high hill he had seen what seemed to be a cloud over the Cocopah mountains, and had also heard heavy rumblings, and once at night had seen a dull light apparently on the very top of the mountain. He believed it to be a volcano. Indians had also brought reports that unusual disturbances had been observed in the Cocopah region, and they were greatly frightened.

They recrossed the line into the United States, and at Indian Wells, on the Colorado desert, not only heard more about the rumblings and smoke, but for the first time saw the smoke themselves, a cloud-like shape that seemed to rest almost on the earth. The party came westward, and on the night when the earthquake shock was feit in San Diego were camped on an elevation some 3,000 feet above the sea level.

That night they not only felt the se-verest earthquake shock, but plainly saw a great light shoot upward in the heavens directly over what was believed to be the main Cocopah mountain. The light continued with greater or brilliancy late into the night, while the rumbling was almost incessant and the tremors frequent. The next morning a murky cloud of the color made by burning sulphur hung like a vast umbrella low on the horizon all day and there were frequently recurring shocks of earthquake. The party remained in camp that night and saw the light in the same place, but much fainter. George Nickle, who has a ranch on the eastern slope of the mountains, said that on the night of the great shake he saw an illumination of the heavens directly over the Cocopah mountains. The light changed re-peatedly, being sometimes very bright, metimes dull and almost imperceptible. The next morning he saw an um-brella-shaped cloud where he had seen the light the night before. There is no doubt in the minds of all who saw the light that it was an active volcano.

George Campbell, an old stockman of the Campo country and proprietor of the Jacumba ranch on the edge of the desert, states that a few days after the first severe earthquake he was on the desert looking after cattle that had strayed far in the direction of Indian Wells. He found that the earth was cracked in many places as a result of the earthquake.

Some fissures were nearly two feet wide. One afternoon he was riding fast when his horse stumbled on the edge of a huge fissure. He recovered himself, however, and jumped across. Campbell turned back to look at the huge crevice, which was about eighteen to twenty-two inches wide and extended north and south as far as he could see and apparently had no bottom.

The old stage road from Campo to lodged from the mountain sides and rolled to the bottom of the eanyon, obstructing travel so much that it is almost impossible to get through with a wagon. This canyon is near Coyote Wells, in Jacumba valley, where are hot and cold springs to which many invalids resort for bathing. Mr. Campbell, the proprietor, says that the flow of the hot springs has ceased entirely.

GARFIELD'S ASSASSIN.

Guiteau's Last Drink-How His Hody Was

Dr. Tilden, formerly chemist at the national medical museum, has told a reporter some unwritten history about Guiteau, President Garfield's assassin. He said that the assassin went to the scaffold in a semi-drunken condition.
"This," added the doctor, "was a necessity. You are aware that when a squad of soldiers entered the jail rotunds a short while before the execution and came to 'order arms' with a loud bang Guiteau fell over in a dead faint. nervous system was shattered, and the physicians felt that they would be unable to get him to the scaffold. consultation was held and it was de-cided to give him a dose of brandy. This was done and he got a big dose too. Not being used to drinking, the dose went to his head, and his 'Oh Lordy' song on the scaffold was, in my estimation, a drunken effusion."
Dr. Tilden, says the San Francisco

Chronicle, described how the body of Guiteau was removed to the museum, then located on Tenth street. He said that the body was never buried, but, after being placed in the coffin, was taken down into the jail cellar, where it remained until after midnight. Soon after that hour an ambulance drove up to the building and the remains were quietly placed therein and quickly driven down town. Then they were taken into the museum through the alley which runs in from F street. Once in the building all that remained of Charles J. Guiteau was taken into the boiler-room and placed in an immense boiler, where it was allowed to boil and bubble unti, all the flesh had fallen from the bones. The latter were then picked out and blenched, and some day will form an interesting exhibit in the
