MILLIONAIRE BOSTWICK'S DEATH.

Excitement of the Fire Killed Him—The Other Bodies Recovered.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—It is now believed that the fire which destroyed the barn of James A. Bostwick, the millionaire, at Mamaroneck, L. I., yesterday, in which two men lost their lives, and from the excitement of which Mr. Bostwick is dead, was caused, accidentally, by the coachman and footman, who are said to have been intoxicated.

Fire broke out shortly after midnight in Constable's barn, which is a short distance from Mr. Bostwick's home at Oriental Point, overlooking the sound. Oriental Point is a short walk from the village. The fire communicated to Mr. Bostwick's barn.

Mr. Bostwick had been ill for some time, and when the alarm was sounded, hurried from his room to the veranda, laboring under much excitement. He had been there but a few minutes when the sight of his property in a blaze unnerved him. Suddenly, without speaking, he fell backward and became unconscious. He died before medical aid could reach him.

When he fell the greatest excitement prevailed in the household. The fire was abandoned to take care of itself. Mr. Bostwick was carried to his room, and every remedy known to the household was employed in the effort to restore him to consciousness.

When the physicians arrived he was dead, and they agreed death had been caused by the rupturing of a blood vessel.

The blackened and charred bodies of the coachman and footman were discovered in the ruins of the barn a few hours after Mr. Bostwick died.

Eight valuable carriage horses were burned to death and a number of carriages and property, valued at $50,000, were also destroyed.

The fire made a big blaze and attracted persons for miles around. As soon as possible the firemen of Mamaroneck, Eye and other surrounding villages, with hundreds of villagers, hurried to the Bostwick place. When they arrived Mr. Bostwick was dead, both stables had been gutted, and two dead men were in the ruins.

It was after the fire had burned out that it was discovered that the coachman and footman were missing. This added considerably to the excitement. Their bodies were found in the debris, burned beyond recognition.

Nothing was saved in either place. Mr. Bostwick's property—totally destroyed—was valued at $50,000. The Constable stables were rebuilt about a year ago, after they had been destroyed by fire. At that time the loss was estimated at $100,000. The new stables were constructed on a more extensive scale, and it is believed the loss by the second fire will be much heavier.

Mr. Bostwick has been prominently identified with the New England railroad and the Standard Oil Company. He was also interested in the New York Steam Company and the Standard Gas Company. He was also owner of the Gas Engine and Power Company, which manufactures the engines for the naphtha launches. Mr. Bostwick's fortune is estimated at about $10,000,000.

RUED HIS BARGAIN.

The Man Who Bought a Bulldog at Half Price.

An excited young man dislocated the bell-knob beside the door of a dog fancier's store on Ninth street the other evening by a vigorous jerk some time after the proprietor had retired for the night, and performed a lively reel on the pavement to keep his blood in circulation while he was awaiting admittance.

"Hello!" he said, when a window above was raised and a nightcapped head appeared. "Are you the man who runs this store?"

A gruff reply in the affirmative came from the second story.

"Well, then, hustle 'round and get ready to come out to my house in the country. I'm the fellow who bought the eight dollar bargain bulldog from you this morning, and I'm not satisfied with the deal at all."

"How's that?" demanded the dealer in embryo sausages, leaning farther out of the window so as to get a good look at the other. "Doesn't he suit you?"

"No, he don't," the young man said, promptly, "and I'll be willing to part with him without any consideration at all. You remember I paid for him and ordered him to be sent out to my house by one of your men, don't you?"

"That's all right."

"Well, that feeble-minded assistant of yours found the family out, and he tied the bloodthirsty brute to the front-door knob, and, say—"

"Well?"

"He's there yet, tina's all, and my wife has been spending the evening with the neighbors. I don't like to disturb him myself, although I'd like to get in the house so as to assist my mother-in-law off the roof of the porch. If you'll come out and get the dog I'll be very—"

A noise, which sounded suspiciously like a chuckle, came from above and interrupted the speaker as the window was shut down. Then the young man proceeded with the intricate steps of the reel while he awaited the appearance of the dog-dealer, occasionally varying the performance by audible expression of sentiments regarding marked-down bulldogs that could only be represented here in long blank lines.

GLADSTONE'S CABINET.

Criticism of the British Press on the Appointments.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The "Standard," in commenting on the new Cabinet, thinks Baron Houghton old enough to have given some evidence of the qualities essential to a statesman, if he had it in him. It promises that the new government will fall in the trial. Lord Rosebery's appointments is evidence of the conservatism with which his more advanced admirers have often reproached Mr. Gladstone and is a warrant for predicting that Mr. Gladstone's bark will prove worse than his bite.

The "Star" is rather emphatic in its condemnation of Gladstone's Cabinet. It says to-day that Gladstone has not adequately recognized the necessity of the situation.

The "Times" says that it is not without significance that Sir George O. Trevelyan's political promotion moves, like his political professions, in a circle. Baron Houghton is a surprise, but he possesses important qualifications for the part; and in spite of the one obvious disadvantage which bespeaks public sympathy there is every reason to believe that he will prove as efficient a representative of the sovereign as that mongrel, a Home Rule Victory, can be. Taken as a whole the Ministry can scarcely be expected to display—with one or two exceptions—that independence of thought which was formerly supposed to be an honorable distinction of Liberal administrations.

SUBSTITUTE SWITCHMEN.

Four hundred non union switchmen left the Ninth and Green streets station of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad in Philadelphia last night, en route for Waverly and Sayre, the intention of the company being to reopen the yards at those places to-day.

The switchmen had a formidable escort in Captain Christian and his corps of thirty police of the Reading Coal & Iron Company. Captain Christian stated to a Press reporter before leaving that he would suffer no "tomfoolery" from the strikers and in case of resistance they would feel his strong right arm as did the Molly Maguires when he succeeded Captain Linden as the chieftain of the Pinkerton force. With Captain Christian also went Chief O'Brien, of the Reading Coal & Iron Company's detective force.
