Great Excitement Caused by the Earthquake Shocks--Not Much Damage. LONDON, Aug. 19.—The shock of an earthquake Wednesday night caused con-side the station and heaped up a tersouthwestern county of Wales. People were generally asleep when a low, rum-bling noise was heard, and the houses rocked and shivered. In Haverfordwest the rumbling and the rocking motion were particularly heard and felt, and hundreds of people, awak-ened from sleep, rushed out into the street in their night-gowns, without waiting to dress.

Ing to dress. Crockery was smashed and furniture moved by the shaking of the buildings, which lasted, however, but a few seconds. The people remained in the streets panic-stricken, and fearful of a more dia-astrons visitation. After an interval another shock came, but it was slight, as compared with the first, and did no damage. There was another interval, and another shock, also slight. After some time, as there was no more sign of seismic disturbance, people returned into their houses and tried to aleep.

MADRID, Aug. 19 .- The captain of the ateamship Vera Cruz, which has arrived the ticket-chopper. He was one of the at Corunna, passed in mid-ocean Capt-Andrews, who is making the voyage from Atlantic City to Huelva alone in a small boat.

The captain of the Vera Cruz offered to help Andrews, and tried to induce him to heart he hoped to soften-while the being Andrews, and tried to induce init to accept food and water. Andrews declined uil aid, and requested only that the cap-tain of the steamship deliver a letter to United States Consul Carricarte in Co-

Capt. Andrews said that he was well, but that he had been delayed by unfavor. a loud guffaw, exclaimed: able weather.

HE DROPPED THE TICKETS. An Episode at the Entrance of the Brook-

iyn Bridge. Tickets for the Brooklyn Bridge railvay are sold in lots of ten, no reduction by the quantity. That is to say, ten tickets cost twenty-five cents, and multiples of ten cannot be bought for anything less than an equal number of multiples of twenty-five. When purchased, the tickets are attached to each other and numbered from one to ten-not sincerely attached, as John Phœnix said of the horse that would not run away with the wagon he was drawing-but so as to be easily detached by the application of a little muscular force through the thumb and forefinger.

Many bridge travelers find it most convenient to tear off a single ticket each time they wish to use one. Others, as soon as they purchase a package, proceed to destroy the "tie that binds," and then, by means of a rubber band, keep the loose tickets from straying into out-of-the-way corners of their pockets.

It was one of the latter who arrived at the Brookivn entrance one day last week when there was more than the usual allowance of mud to the square inch. Thousands of hurrying feet had carried a large quantity of the mud insternation in Pembrokeshire, the extreme minal moraine close to the ticket-boxes. The traveler just mentioned approached with the haste characteristic of a Brooklyn man having his office in New York, and just before reaching the box thrust his hand into his waistcoat pocket for a ticket.

He got it. In fact, he got several. And he got more than he bargained for.

The next moment he was gazing with rueful eye-as the novel-writers sayupon a dozen or more tickets reposing within the space of a square yard upon the mud-decorated flooring.

There was nothing for it but to stoop down and gather up the nasty bits of paper, and, with his overcoat dragging in the mud, the man proceeded to re-plevin his property. Meantime thirty or forty passengers were pressing around the unlucky one muttering audibly at the delay which his sup-posed awkwardness had caused. The man kept his temper admirably, though he couldn't keep his face from growing red, and his ears visibly tingled.

All would have gone well-at least, comparatively well-had it not been for men who may be described as "too fresh." He laughed coarsely when the mishap occurred, and continued to smile-like the man on the stile when confronted by the awful cow whose process of recovering the scattered and bedraggled tickets went on. When only two or three remained to be gathered up an idea occurred to him. He slapped his thigh vigorously, and with

"We won't charge you anything for the mud!"

That was the last straw.

Coal Creek Taken After a

Desperate Struggle.

Reported Killed and Wounded. KNOXVILLE, Tenn. Aug. 19.-Captain Keller Anderson, who for nearly a year has held the convicts at Coal Creek, is in the hands of the miners at last. The latest reports which are reliable say that the battle at Camp Anderson was com-menced as early as 10 o'clock yesterday morning. For several hours the firing was not general. Ahout 2 o'clock the miners, to the number of a thousand, made an organized assault on the fort, and were repulsed. The second assault was easily repulsed. The third attempt resulted in a regular pitched battle and the Gatling guns got in their work, but to what extent is not known. Several of the assailants were wounded, and many of them were probably killed.

The fort occupies the crest of a hill commanding a range of Coal Creek valley for five miles east and west. To the north is a sour of the valley in which the stockade of the Knoxville Iron Company is located.

The distance from Fort Anderson across about 1,400 yards. On the top of the ridge the miners had planted two field pieces furnished them by sympathizers in Kentucky. On the north sides of the ridge and creek skirting Fort Anderson the hill is a dense growth of hemitock and laurel. The assailants of the fort had all the advantages of hiding, and if one of their number should be wounded he could be hastily removed to a place of safety without any one being the wiser. No one is allowed to approach within a half mile of the fort unless he is in sympathy with the miners.

Between the first and second assault on the fort three minors were captured. They sent up a flag of truce to Capt. Anderson to ask for release. He was expecting such a message and met the men on equal grounds.

He was seized by several of them and rushed down the hill, and finally taken to one of the hotels in the village, where he is guarded by Robert Lindsay, a deputy United States Marshal, and a number of friends. They are holding him as a hostage and will not agree to give him up until the troops and convicts are with

An English Parrot Story.

The following parrot story comes from London: A well-known bird fancier had a parrot which could repeat many obrases. One day, being anxious to exhibit his cleverness before some friends, he several times commanded the bird to say "Uncle," but the parrot would not repeat it. In his anger he seized the bird, and half-twisting his neck, exclaimed: "Say 'uncle,' you beggar!" and threw him in the henhouse, in which he had ten prize Dorking chickens, Shortly afterwards, thinking he had killed the parrot, he went to the pen. To his surprise, he saw nine of the fowls dead on the floor with their necks wrung, and the parrot standing on the tenth twisting his neck and screaming. 'Say 'uncle,' you beggar, say 'uncle!'

It would be hard to tell correctly just what effect the receipt of this message had upon the miners. The cool-headed ones, the men who lay all plans and who so successfully carry them out, took the answer as final. They were apprised of the scheme for the alregration of the lease system which at he shortest must take 20 days, and recognized that troops and convicts could not well be removed "with dignity" before that time.

They began counseling the men whom they could to return to their homes as everthing was now settled. On the other hand the hot-headed-warm-blooded ones wanted to make the attack anyway, as they thought Buchanan was merely figuring for time on which to get the troops at Coal Creek. It seems they carried their point.
