A YOUNG MAN LOSES HIS RIGHT HAND

AND NARROWLY ESCAPED LOSING HIS LIFE.

ON THE RAILROAD YESTERDAY

A Dreadful Warning to the Red Bridge Gang-One of Their Number Made a Cripple for Life, terrible example have any effect the day for the dissolution of the red bridge gang should be near at One of the members met with an sceident early yesterday morning that should strike terror to the hearts of his companions and cause them to mend their ways.

The victim was Michael Byrne, a young man residing in the First ward. He is a cripple for life, having lost his right hand. It seems that the gang assembled at the red bridge Saturday night and partook three o'clock yesterday morning Byrne left the crowd to make his way home-

Shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday morning the early P. & R. freight trains pulled up to the red bridge to switch on the tracks leading to the Main street depot. The engineer saw the body of a man lying on the track shead of his train. He reversed his engine, but was unable to bring the train to a stop. The engine slowly ap proached the body and the cow-catcher shoved the man's head from the track, but the wheels passed over the victim's right hand. The train was stopped and the engineer and fireman jumped. They picked up the man. It was Byrne in a His right hand was crushed to s stupor.

Byrne was taken in charge by his companions. The crushing of the hand had with the assistance of his friends he walked to town in search of medical aid. They first called at Dr. Straup's office, then went Callen's and finally back to Dr. Stein's. Upon the second visit to the latter's house the callers forced open the door. A great trail of blood marked the course the men had taken and immense peels formed wherever they stopped. Finally Chief of Police Davis tied Byrne's arm above the the manu: wrist and stopped the flow of blood, and Dr. Stein attended the victim at his home, An exemination of the injuries convinced the doctor that the hand would have to come off and it was at once amoutated. To-day Byrne was reported as doing comparatively well. One of the doctors who failed to respond to Byrne's call said yesterday, "The crowd finest playing cards, in the market 5 cents that called at my place was in such a condition that I concluded one of their numbar had been beaten or otherwise burt in a Carpets, Oil Cloth drunken brawl and I declined to act in the case. In almost every instance where we respond to such calls we not only never get paid for our services, but are compelled to spend several days at court, for which we get nothing but the regular witness fees and our home practice must suffer. In the Byrne case, when the crowd was asked the cause of trouble they could not answer intelligently, only that 'this feller is hurt.' I concluded it was one of the regulation brawl affairs and would not touch it. Of as it proved to be, I would have given temporary service at once."

A prominent gentleman said in connection with the case last night: "It is too bad, for the sake of the young men as well as done to permanently break up this red bridge gang. I know some of them and know that when they are at work at the ollieries they behave well and attend to their duties, but when night comes the beer flows and then they change. I believe that if the relatives of the young men go about the matter properly they can hold the parties who furnish the bear responsible and thus partly, at least, break up the practice. As I understand it, all the members of the gang 'chip in' for two kegs of beer. One is appointed to wheel the kegs up to the bridge and tap them. For this plots, one the restoration of the Indian service he is not obliged to 'chip in.' Then, dynasty, the other an organized effort to I understand, there is still another arrangement. The parties who furnish the beer have made a bargain by which they give a keg of beer for every seven or eight empty kegs returned; so by the two arrangements the gang is kept supplied almost every

THOSE STORES.

The Complaints of Business Men in Proper Hands, The editorial in the News yesterday con erning the HERALD's crueade against the sernicious company store system in town by which legitimate business men are made to suffer is worthy of response in one paricular and only so far as it may solighten the public. The HERALD opened the crusade upon the solicitation of business nen who asked that it be done to publicly call the attention of the P. & R. C. & I Co. to the matter. They stated that when the company appointed the proper parties to investigate they would tell all they knew about the system. The HERALD first satisfied itself that there was just cause for complaint and then opened fire. What dent John Veith paid a visit to town. He called upon several of the complaining business men to learn their grievances. Some of them flunked (the town is full of funkers) but there were others more honorable who stood by their declarations and told Mr. Veith frankly and plainly the grounds for their complaints, as set forth in story which is at once deep, fascinating the HERALD weeks ago. And these parties and thorouguly sustained in its interest also fulfilled their duty of honor to the dozen. Come, rain or shine, as this will be HERALD by giving the names of the parties who left their stores, the reasons they gave for leaving, and the stores to which they transferred their patronage. So promise to the legitimate business men; the honorable complainants have placed the

BUNDAY SERMON.

Rev. Powield's Interesting Discourse in the Methodist Episcopal Church. The sermon in the Methodist Episcopal shurch on Sunday morning was on "Justification by Works," The text was from Jame: 2 20-22 "But with thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead? Was not Abraham our father justified by works when he had offered Issac his son upon the alter? Seest thou bow faith wrought with his works and by works was faith made perfect?" It has been supposed by some that Paul's doctrine of justification by faith and James' doctrine of justification by works contradict each other. Properly understood it will be seen that they really supplement each other. Paul approaches the doctrine from the theological side and James from the practical. More attention has been paid to the apparent difference between them than to the substantial agreement. It was Paul who wrote about the necessity of being 'rich in good works' and James who showed the value of being "rich in faith," Taul wrote to penitent sinners who were and all that was left saking "what must I do to be saved" and who were being barrassed by Judaizing teachers who offered the empty ceremonies of a dead formalism as the remedy for ain, hence he showed that men were "justified by faith without the deeds of the law." James wrote to self-righteous professors who thought and taught that it made no difference how they lived if only they believed aright, hence in his treatment of the same subject he showed that "by works a man is justified and not by faith only." This is in strict accord with t'aul's doctrine in the passage "not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified."

There are two opposite poles of thought rom which we are in equal danger to-day, "That it makes no difference what afternoon and while there he would see if one believes if only his life is right" and "that it makes no difference what sort of a life one leads if only his creed is right" Paul gives us the antidote to one and James gives the antidote to the other. It may be denied that anybody knows such views. But if they do not these are the logical outcome of many views that are being taught. In our efforts to get away from legalism religion is in danger of being regarded not as a life but an experience And in the world's borror of creeds and dogmas essential truth-the only thing out of which enduring character can be built-is in danger of being trampled upon. The truth does not lie between the extreme statements of the two apostles but includes them both. Paul teaches that we are saved by faith-which worketh by love. James tel's us we are saved by works-inspired by faith. Both units in exhibiting the spurionsness of a so-called faith which does not werk. Men profess to believe that the world is nothing and heaven is everything and then anchor themselves to the world as though it were not to pass away with the lusts thereof. They profess to believe that there is an awful hell and then do nothing to save men from it. They profess to believe that intemperance is the greatest curse in the world and do not lift a hand to believe in the value of the christian Sabbath and then attend Sunday base ball nany others who Mrs. William Ecker, of Newark, N. J., from such degrading practices do nothing who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and to discourage them. Such faith is wortha faith save a man? Two tests may be applied to determine the value of a man's creed-and they are well nigh infallible. dents of Colorado Springs, Col., the past The first is: What does it do for him? Does it make him better and happier than he would be without it? The second is: What does it do for other people? Does it make them better or happier than they would be if he did not hold it. A man's creed can be justified only by the good works it Inspires. "Wherefore by their fruit shall ye know them."

"One of the Pinest," E. J. Hassan's "One of the Finest" will o the attraction at Forguson's theatre Saturday night and much is promused and expected in the way of a grand scenic and somedy production. The piace has undergone some decided changes since it left Gus Williams' hands, and is considered now to be much stronger in a dramstic sonia. More attention is paid to the plot and action and consequent situations, and less to the starring of any particular member of the cast. In point of fact, under the new arrangement, the different characters are so evenly balanced, as to work, that no one is given prominence over the others, and all barmonine to produce a good impression on the auditor. The specialty business, which is introduced with some regard to consistency, something rather out of the usual run, is all good, and some of the singing especially fine. Monday will be absolutely the last day for the Rosbon gallery in Shenandoah. Beautiful cabinets as low as $1.00 per
