Deserving Praise.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. C. H. Hagenbuch, Druggist.

WORK WITH FOOT AND HAND.

East Indian Artisans Generally Able to Make Use of the Præcise Tool.

The traveler who walks in the native quarters of the cities of India can easily study there all industries in their beginnings, as they were probably practiced in Europe in the middle ages. The shops are usually open and the workmen can be seen inside; textile industries, pottery, shoe making, joinery, armoring, jewelry, confectioners—all can be observed in a single street, like Chitpore street, Calcutta. If we take pains to examine attentively the methods of working, we shall be struck by the enormous function played by the lower limb. Whatever the industry, the Indian, squatting or sitting on the ground, works with his feet as well as with his hands, and it might be said, adds a writer in the Revue Scientifique, that all four of his limbs are in constant exercise. The joiner, for example, has no assistant to hold his plank, but makes his great toe serve that purpose. The shoemaker does not employ a fixed clamp for the shoe on which he is sewing, but holds it in his feet, which change position to suit his convenience, while his nimble hands do the sewing. The metal worker holds the joint of his shears on his feet in cutting copper.

In the making of wooden combs I have seen the comb held straight up by the feet, while the workman marked the teeth with one hand and with the other directed the instrument to cut them. The wood turner directs the hand-rest with his great toes; so, generally, do Egyptian and Arabian turners. In smoothing twine or sewing a bridle the Indians hold the article between the first and second toes. When the butcher cuts his meat into small pieces he holds the knife between the first and second toes, takes the meat in both hands and pulls it across the knife. I have seen a child climb a tree and hold a branch between his toes. The great toe is capable of considerable lateral movements from the second toe, so that the Indian can easily pick up articles from the ground with his foot and even exert some force sideways.

THE TEMPLE OF BAAL.

Description of the Ruins of What Was Once a Magnificent Building.

There rises a huge wall seventy feet high, inclosing a square court of which the side is seven hundred and forty feet long, says a writer in Blackwood's Magazine. Part of the wall, having fallen into ruins, has been rebuilt from the ancient materials, but the whole of the north side with its beautiful pilasters, remains perfect. As the visitors enter the court they stand still in astonishment at the extraordinary sight which meets their eyes, for here, crowded within those four high walls, is the native village of Tadmor. It was natural enough for the Arabs to build their mud huts within these ready-made fortifications, but the impression produced by such a village in such a place is indescribably strange. The temple, so to speak, is entered out at the core, and little but the shell remains. But here and there a fluted Corinthian column or group of columns, with entablature still perfect, rises in stately grace far over the wretched huts, the rich, creamy color of the limestone and the beautiful moldings of the capitals contrasting with the clear blue of the cloudless sky. The best view of the whole is to be obtained from the roof of the naos, which, once beautiful and adorned with sculpture, is now all battered and defaced, and has been metamorphosed into a squalid little mosque. To describe the view from that roof were indeed a hopeless task. High into the clear blue air and the golden sunshine rise the stately columns; crowded, and jumbled, and heaped together below, untouched by the gladdening sunbeams, unfreshened by the pure, free air, lies all the squalor and wretchedness of an Arab mud-hut village.

MEADOWS IN ENGLAND.

They Are Probably the Oldest and Best in the World.

How and when men first learned to make hay will probably never be known. For haymaking is a "process," and the product is not simply sun-dried grass, but grass which has been partly fermented, and is as much the work of men's hands as flour or cider. Probably its discovery was due to accident, but possibly man learned it from the pikas, the "calling hares" of the steppes which cut and stack hay for the winter. That idea would fit in nicely with the theory that central Asia was the "home of the Aryan race," if we were still allowed to believe it, and hay making is certainly an art mainly practiced in cold countries for winter forage.

Probably there are no meadows in the world, says the Spectator, so good as those in England, or so old. Yet from the early Anglo-Saxon times old meadow has been distinguished from "pastures," and has always been sencer. Two-thirds of what is now established meadow land still shows the marks of ridge and furrow; and from the great time required to make a meadow—ten years at least on the best land, a hundred on the worst—men have always been reluctant to break up old pasture. The ancient meadows, with their great trees and close, rich turf, are the sole portion of the earth's surface which modern agriculture respects and leaves in peace. Hence the excellence of the meadows of England and the envy of the American.

Holland's Three Cities.

In the strange little country of Holland the three principal cities are Amsterdam, Rotterdam and The Hague. These cities, says the Dublin Independent, are a peculiar medley of canals and streets, trees and masts, bridges and boats. Amid their apparent disorder there is more or less of symmetry. Amsterdam is a semi-circle, Rotterdam an equilateral triangle, and The Hague a square. The difference between the three cities socially has been aptly put: "At Rotterdam fortunes are made; at Amsterdam they are consolidated; at The Hague they are spent."

WELSH IN WEST VIRGINIA.

What a Correspondent Writes Concerning Proposed Colony.

During the last few years several Welsh people of this state have been interested in farming, timber and coal lands in West Virginia. They have bought already several thousand acres in Randolph, Usher and Webster counties. A company was formed for the purpose of mining the coal and manufacturing and preparing the lumber for market. The company has two large saw mills which have been in operation for some time. The Pittsburg & West Virginia R. R. passes within half a mile of some of their land. This railroad comes from Pittsburg and is now completed as far as Pickens, a new town several miles beyond the Welsh colony, and which is to be the terminus at present at least of the above road.

A town site has been marked out of about 20 acres, and which is three miles or so from the track of the above road. All of the lots have been sold to build homes and other purposes.

The men interested in the project intend to connect the town with the main line by a narrow gauge railroad for the present. This road will enable all there to bring their lumber to market for one-fourth what it would cost them otherwise. Also it will give them access to the different veins of coal already found in different sections.

Last July two men, Isaac Smith, of Olyphant, and Matthew Perkins, of Shenandoah, also the president of the company, and Rev. D. S. Thomas, of Edwardsville, Pa., were down in West Virginia nearly the whole month, investigating matters and making further tests for coal and other minerals. It seems these men had done their work very thoroughly and their reports were complete and encouraging. They discovered some new veins of coal and reported excellent market for lumber, with good prices. Some kind of lumber which two years ago was not considered of much value, is now much called for and brings a good price. Many were glad to hear this, since they had bought land with nearly all the other kinds sold on it.

A meeting was held at Wilkes-Barre a few days ago to hear the reports of these men, and parties were present from Nanticoke, Shenandoah, Scranton, Warrior Run, Plymouth, Wilkes-Barre, Edwardsville, etc. After listening to the reports a railroad company was formed, called the Welsh Colony R. R. Co., to build and operate the road to connect the town of Arvon with the main line of the P. & W. Va. R. R. This new branch has already been surveyed and the grading has been commenced. This will be of great benefit to all the Welsh people having land in that section of the country. Knowing the value of this, no doubt the individuals interested there will soon take up the stock. This company is officered for the present by the same men as the Manufacturing & Building Company. Welsh people who possess no land there may take shares in the railroad company but not any more in the building company. There is no doubt as to the future of Arvon and this whole section occupied by the Welsh, once their town is connected with the road from Pittsburg. Already new enterprises are springing up all over. Of course the greatest attention at present is given to the lumber business, but among others, the P. & W. Va. R. R. Co., is just now moving after the coal. They have some men testing the veins that are above water level, and others are drilling to prove the veins below it. In consequence of this the price of land has advanced all around there.

It appears that the Welsh people got into the country in the nick of time. They are asking to-day three times the amount per acre that they did two years ago, and for some much more. All this has been brought about by the better facilities of taking the wealth of the country to market. The value of the land in the possession of Welsh people there has advanced greatly already, and will advance much more when their branch road will be completed to Arvon. Those who have any interest whatever in this section should mark carefully the signs of the times and watch the tide as it rises. W. F. D.

The cheap and popular excursion to Reading, yesterday, from points along the main line of the Reading railroad system, was very successful, nearly five hundred people took advantage of the low rates. About fifty people from this place went to Mahanoy Plains where they joined the excursionists. The day was pleasant and all had a good time.

THE READING'S

Poughkeepsie Bridge Route—A Continuous Track of Steel to Boston.

No longer do travelers between this section of the country and New England have to undergo the discomforts of street transfer through the city of New York. This has all been obviated, and the Reading Railroad with its continuous line of steel rail now carries its passengers (train) vestibuled from end to end, from Philadelphia to Boston without a single change of cars. This new route, which is via the great Poughkeepsie Bridge, has many attractions, and is rapidly becoming very popular. The accommodations are first-class in every respect; the trains are vestibuled from end to end and are scheduled on fast express time; the roadway is perfect, making the ride pleasant and comfortable, the country traversed abounds in grand and picturesque scenery and the coaches are very models of the car builders' art. There are both day and night trains in each direction, the day trains being vestibuled and having Pullman Buffet Parlor cars attached, and the night trains have Pullman Buffet Sleeping cars. The eastbound trains are the New England Day Express, which leaves Philadelphia 9th and Green streets, on weekdays only at 10:00 a. m., and the New England Night Express which leaves 9th and Green streets at 6:45 p. m. and 24th and Chestnut streets, at 6:20 p. m. daily, Sundays included. The west-bound trains are the Quaker City Day Express which leaves Boston, (N. Y. & N. E. R. R. Summer street depot), on weekdays only, at 9:30 a. m., and the Quaker City Night Express, which leaves Boston, (B. & M. R. R. Causeway street depot) at 5:45 p. m. daily, Sundays included.
