T. B. FIELDERS.

The New York "World's" Opinion of Our Former Townsman.

The other representative of the World who went especially to Hamburg for the New York World is a brilliant type of the newspaper reporter who tells the average American everything that he knows, and is frequently abused by the average American in return. If there is any news in Hamburg or in that neighborhood Mr. Thomas Fielders will get it into the composing room of the Sunday World just about as soon as it happens over there. Half a dozen stories could be told to prove that in the person of Mr. Fielders The World's staff of reporters is brilliantly represented in Hamburg. One will do. A good many reporters on a certain occasion boarded a ship in the lower bay to get news of a wreck. When the young men in the discharge of their duty had prepared their accounts of the event which they were to describe, it pleased some little whippersnapper in blue to order their tugboat away and to forbid the reporters to leave the ship until the papers should have gone to press. Mr. Thomas Fielders, now in Hamburg for the World, made a polite bow to Mr. Whipper-snapper, buttoned up his manuscript in his inside pocket and dived head first off the rail of the steamer. It happened to be winter and pretty cold, but Mr. Fielders' article got into the composing room all right and was printed on the following day. If there is any news in Hamburg Mr. Fielders will get it, and the mere fact that he will get the cholera or break his neck in the undertaking will not worry him at all.

A Sunset.

O Great Salt Lake is but one of the matchless spectacles to be seen in Utah. A new book "Utah, a Peep into a Mountain Walled Treasury of the Gods." is now issued and can be had postpaid by sending 25 cents to J. H. Bennett, Salt Lake City. It is expected that the Knights Templar and others visiting Colorado the coming season will extend their trip to Utah via the Rio Grande Western Railroad in both directions. That road affords choice of three distinct routes and the most magnificent scenery in the West. Two trains daily across the continent.

THE NOTE BOOK.

Some of the Topics That People Talking About To-day.

To the student of human nature the luncheon counter offers a fruitful field for observation and cogitation. The average man who has money enough to command a fair share of the comforts of life, prides himself on being rather fastidious about his victuals. He insists on cleanliness above all things. He becomes very indignant if at a restaurant a plate is set before him that bears the imprint of dirty fingers. His knife and fork must bear no trace of the service they have done for the guest who last used them. His cup and saucer must be immaculate, or there will be trouble for somebody.

And if he should discover, in any way, that the food set before him was something which had been previously handled and rejected by other patrons of the restaurant—why, he would take a fit right off, and when he recovered he would bring suit against the proprietor, confident in the assurance that any jury which wasn't tampered with would award him heavy damages.

But when he confronts a lunch counter all this fastidiousness vanishes. He sees dozens of hands pawing over the contents of various dishes, without any sensations of squeamishness becoming apparent in his interior department. He calmly helps himself and proceeds to consume it without being in the slightest degree disturbed by the reflection that the particular morsel he chose for the gratification of his appetite had been touched by many fingers—some probably grossly in need of washing—before securing it.

If he uses a fork to help himself, it isn't likely to be a clean fork that he employs. All this, the philosopher would say, tends to show that the average man is more a creature of habit than of reason, and that what fastidiousness he manifests is simply based on custom.

To the home-come everything has a charmed appearance.

Saw you ever a place in all your wanderings quite so beautiful, one-half so comfortable, one-tenth so welcome, and one-hundredth part so dear as this plain-looking house, with the dusty doorsteps, the close-barred shutters, an area lawn not six feet wide, and a lovely garden in the back yard. The very dog delighted to get home, makes a rush for his kennel, a thousand laughs to the minute in his vibrant tail. With nervous eagerness he flutters here and there, investigating dismantled caches of half-remembered bones, while now and then a yelp of indignant remonstrance announces the discovery that much despised and intensely-hated cats have had the outrageous effrontery to invade his domain during his absence.

In the greater house, with much the same dismay, the good wife, foolishly seeking for things she does not wish to find, proclaims the invasion of the moths. What a nervous tension in every heart, as the good man, trying with most stupid transparency to veil his own eagerness under a clumsy assumption of deliberation, unlocks the front door. Everybody says, "Oh, no! we could have had it open fifty times!" So could he if he wasn't so eager to get in. When it is opened just wide enough for one person to squeeze through at a time, the entire family make a rush to march in abreast. The household flows through the long deserted rooms like a living torrent, a torrent and a half, or two torrents.

Vainly does the commander-in-chief endeavor, by word of command, and clutch of hand, to restrain the household troops. They will be a well-disciplined garrison in a day or two; just now they are ruthless invaders. It is her natural desire to have the first look in every room, to make the first orderly investigation in every quarter.

During the summer months it is a common thing to have more than one light dress stained by the grass. Such marks are easily removed with alcohol. Put a little of the liquid in a saucer and wet the stained part with it. Rub well and the green will disappear.

Burn the garbage. Lavelle fair this week. Did you get registered? The schools are well attended. The stock of ice is running low. The "apples" are over for this year. The "Growler" is the name of a saloon on the "Rocks." The Shenandoah Business College will reopen to-night. It would be good policy to have the exonerations lists printed. The Reading fair last week drew many Shenandoah people to that place. The "Old Homestead" would be a drawing card for Manager Ferguson. Shenandoah will have its quota of election booths—in fact they are already here. "Widow Murphy's Goat" will be one of the attractions at the theatre this season. Alfred Kelsey is with the company. The races at the Orwigsburg fair last week are said to have been most exciting. Shenandoah was well represented at the fair.

Miss Mattie Price and Bertha Fones have gone to Fountain Springs and Gordon to visit friends.

Miss Katie McInnis, of Lowell, Mass., is spending a few weeks in town, the guest of Mrs. David Price.

M. D. Mettler, of Beaver Valley, was a visitor to town to-day and made a pleasant call at the HERALD office.

Miss Anellie Ferguson, who was visiting friends here the past two weeks, left for her home in Philadelphia on Saturday.

Rev. D. I. Evans, who returned from Europe last week, yesterday again took charge of the pulpit in the Welsh Baptist church.

A Hunter.

Thomas B. Fielders, who first made his debut as a newspaper writer on the EVENING HERALD during the Mollie Maguire times, and who is well known throughout this region, hastened to Hamburg for the New York World and Friday last's paper gave a three column cable report of the cholera situation there. Mr. Fielders plunged fearlessly into the hospitals and cemeteries.

Leg Broken.

Daniel Lebe, of town, a blacksmith employed at the Stoddard colliery, Gilberston, had his right leg broken on Saturday evening by a part of a line shaft falling on him. He was taken to the Miners' Hospital.
