NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT.

The Grand Army Display at Washington Next Week.

Washington is not as large as New York or Philadelphia but it will accommodate the members of the Grand Army of the Republic and their friends next week. Pennsylvania will send 10,000 of her veterans.

The authorities have provided free quarters for 55,000 of them, and the hotels and private houses will furnish accommodations for the vast crowd not members of the Grand Army.

The entertainment given the veterans is a local matter in which the citizens of Washington do everything and the General Government nothing. Every dollar that is being expended in preparation, or will be expended, was raised by the people of Washington and not a cent came from the general treasury. The Senate was willing to vote money to help entertain the men who had saved the Treasury, but the House would not yield to giving a dollar, and was only with difficulty brought to consent that the people of Washington might use some of their own money for the purpose.

It was shameful that the House of Representatives should prevent the United States Government from acting decently toward the men who saved its existence in its days of mortal peril. This will be the first, last, and only time that these soldiers will be in the National Capital as a body. It will be the only opportunity the Government will have to show any hospitality to the veterans, and it is disgraceful to the National reputation that not a dollar was allowed to be expended by the Nation in the entertainment of its veterans when they gathered for the first and last time in the Capital for which they fought.

The whole blame for this disgraceful thing rests upon the House of Representatives. The Senate stood ready to appropriate liberally for this entertainment, but the House, led by such men as Dockery, of Missouri, doggedly refused, and fought the Senate's liberality until it was defeated. The officials generally in Washington, from the President down, have been kindly helpful, and have done all that it was possible to do, in the absence of Congressional appropriation, to aid in making the National Encampment a thoroughly enjoyable gathering.

The citizens of Washington have done wonderfully. Not wealthy at all, as citizens go in this country, with one-third of the population made up of negroes, who but a few years ago were merely slaves; with another large portion of the population clerks living on meagre salaries; the people of Washington have yet raised $150,000 with which to entertain the veterans. Everything considered, this is far better than any other city has done, and the people of Washington deserve an immense amount of credit for it. The National Encampment—thanks to them, and to them alone—will be a glorious success.

The illuminations at the National Encampment will be an astonishment to all present, for they will be on a scale never before attempted. The 'Citizens' Committee appropriated $15,000, and the electric light companies, which are to do the work, will add possibly $10,000 more to this. Everything will be on the grandest scale, and the machinery and appliances, which the companies have brought to that city for the display, are valued at over $80,000. A part of the programme is the display of the corps badges in their appropriate colors in incandescent lights. The First Defenders, of which Schuykill county furnished two companies, will lead the line of march. Among these we hope to see our own townsmen, Comrades Mangum, Hughes and Howard.
