A NEW INDUSTRY and Bottled Goods, A Scotch Firm of Lacemakers Start Works in Columbia, Lancaster County.

PENNSYLVANIA GETS

The McKinley Bill Closed the American Market for Their Goods.

So They Had to Go Out of Business or Move Here, and Accepting the Latter Alternative, They Now Furnish Employment for American Labor and Hope for Harrisons decrisible has gone on his way constantly Re-Election. Re-Election

COLUMNIA, Pa., Sept. 21, Pennsylvania furnishes the latest substantial argument in favor of the McKinley bill, and it comes right from home here In busy little Columbia, on the banks of the Susquehanna, in rich old Lancaster county An entirely new industry hereabouts, lace making, with a plant driven from Scot land by the McKinley tariff, is a flourish ing innovation of this year. Among the clouds of flatly contradictory arguments and theories which are raised for and against the policy of protection in campaign discussions, it is always refreshing to get hold of a solid, unquestioned. uncompromising fact. The business histary of Columbia for the year 1592 offers a Land Commissioner at Chimgo, Mr.  $E_r$  P, series of facts which prove the truth of Bkene. In addition, a few weeks before the several of the main contentions of the Republican advocates of protection. One fact is the establishment in the borough by a Scotch firm, of a large factory for the manufacture of lace curtains, the proprie-tors having been compelled to move their tors having been competied to move their business to this, country under the stress of the conditions imposed by the McKin-ley tariff. If it be the noblest work of man to make two blades of grass to grow where one has grown before, it is equally a patent of nobility to make two factories mittle and hum where one has ratified and human by her black of the stress the stress statistics are been been been to be the stress to be the stress back back of the stress the stress to be the stress back back of the stress the stress stress back of the stress back of the stress stress of the stress stress back of the stress stress back of the stress of the stress stress of the stress stress of the stress stress of the stress of the stress stress of the stress stress of the s hummed before. ### A Wise Business Moye,

A Wise Business Moye, The firm of Clehand, Campbell & Co., of 19 Montrose street, Glasgow, having their factory at Darvel in Ayershire, is one of the Scotch hacemaking firms which have spring up in that locality since the Irade mion troubles blasted and scattered the lacemaking industries of Nottingham. The latter place was the lacemaking center of Great Britain, having 100 factories in of Great Britain, inving 190 factories in the old days. Ninety-five per cent, of the lace output of Cleland, Campbell & Co. lace output of Clehnd, Cambbell & Co. was taken up by the American market, under the old tariff of 40 per cent ad valorom. The McKinley bill raised that duty to 50 per cent. There were already two or three lace curtain factories strug-gling along in Philadelphia and Scrauton. The American importers had loaded up with goods just prior to the date on which the McKinley bill became a law, to avoid the McKinley bill became a law, to avoid the McKinley bill became a law, to avoid reached by the Rio Grande Western Rallway See that your excursion tickets read both ways is that read, which offers choice of three diatinet route and the most magnificent rati-diatinet route and the most magnificent rati-road scenary in the world. semarkable organization, winning success in every effort, and producing most actonshing results in reclaiming the fallen eforming the vicious, and elevating the debas-d. There can be no sort of doub that the Salvarion Army is doing more real good among the poor people o England than all the other church agencies com bined. This the people of England see o clearly with their own eyes that a l the virulent assaults of the ristocratic churchten and their confederates fall barmless. One of the most powerful of these assaults was the charge that Booth was enrichlyg himself, (smily, and intimate as sociates out of the stream of money pourse into the coffers of the Salvation Army after the publication of Booth's sensations but only too true book. "In Darkest Eng land." The churchmon had a substan in grievance to ambitter them o this suffect. for a large portion of the millions of dollars contributed by charitable people had prelously been sent to them for expenditure The reaction is setting in, and General Booth is finding pies ty of defenders among he educated and wealthy. Careful invest t gations have been made of the Salvation Army's business methods by expert ac countants, not at all triendly to it, and their verdict is that there is not a railway back, or factory in England which keeps its accounts more rigidiy and clearly than facturers will follow, and there will be a second more rightly and clearly than rush for facemakers that will transfer the the Salvation  $\mathbf{Army}$ . General Booth recentre of the lace curtain manufacture to ceives no salary whatever from the Salva-

o Army. His living is provid d for b a f and contributed by some friends, and he only draws from the Salvation Arm r ssurv funds for traveling in the plainest possible siyle. Every shilling so drawn i car fully covered by youchers, checked and rechecked some jour or five times by independent fureaus. All the letters ad dressed to him-except the few marked 'strictly personal''-are opened by the Army's clerks. Every contribution go through the same mill, and is checked and sounterchecked, beyond the faint at chance of misappropriation. The only member of the Booth family who receives a salary h Bramwell Booth, who gets $1 000 a year, and a small house. Business men familiar with him say that he has abilities which would justify any considerable firm in paving him $20 000 a year.

The War Cry, the efficial organ of the Salvation Army, and edited by the Booths, pays a profit of $50,000 a year, and the sate of 'In Darkest England" has already returned a profit of $30,000 all of which turned into the general lund. The "Farm Colory," which was started in 1891, has already cost about $400,000; the "City Ry, August 30, and September 37.
