THREE HARVEST EXCURSIONS

Half Rates via the Illinois Central Aug. 30, Sept. 27 and Oct. 25th, 1892.

The Central Route will sell excursion tickets to the Agricultural Regions of the West, South-west and South, at one fare for the round trip, from stations on its lines north of Cairo, on August 30th and September 27th. A third excursion will be run to the South and Southwest on October 25th. Your local ticket agent will give you full particulars in regard to these Harvest Excursions; arrangements can also be made in this connection to visit the desirable Railroad Lands for sale by the Illinois Central in Southern Illinois, on obtaining special permission to do so by addressing the Company's Land Commissioner at Chicago, Mr. E. P. Shene. In addition, a few weeks before the first excursion date, your local ticket agent will be able to furnish you with a special folder, issued by the Illinois Central, which will give you particulars of these Harvest Excursions in such form as will enable you to plan your journey at home. Should you not be within call of a railroad ticket agent, address A. H. Hanson, G. P. A., Illinois Central R. R., Chicago, Ill. 8-4-34

SOUND ADVICE FROM SHERMAN.

The Veteran Leader Addresses His Fellow Republicans.

Necessity of Organization and a Close Personal Canvass.

A Strong Presentation of the Republican Policy of Protection and a Severe Arraignment of the Democracy's Free Trade Plank of the Chicago Convention by a Tried and Experienced Statesman.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 21.
That veteran statesman, John Sherman responded with surprising vim and spirit when he was asked to chat about the outlook of the national campaign. Every Republican can find sound advice in his interesting talk.
"The Republican party need have no fear of the outcome of this presidential canvass if proper steps are taken to organize their forces and clearly present to the people the vital issues of the campaign," said Senator Sherman deliberately. "From what I understand, the management of the Republican national organization is in skilled and trusted hands, and with the very able and forcible presentation of the Republican side in the president's message we may congratulate ourselves on having started out so well."
"There should be no delay in beginning the work of organization. Where clubs are already organized they should seek to extend their influence, to gather in new members, to find out those persons in their respective communities who are Republicans or who incline to support the Republican ticket, and to give them the opportunity of joining the club and participating in its efforts. Where there are signs of disaffection, of factional difficulty, or even of a want of proper interest, that sort of personal work should be undertaken which will bring the right influences to bear for the removal of every source of embarrassment.

Advice to Republicans.
"Success can only be guaranteed by close contacts and complete organization, and then by personal effort on the part of all those citizens who believe that the country is better off under a Republican than under a Democratic administration. Let those who so believe get together in their various communities. Let them talk over the issues of the campaign with their neighbors. Let them equip themselves for a discussion by a careful study of the Republican newspapers and Republican documents. If they hear a Democratic argument advanced which they are not sufficiently informed to answer let them write to the state committee or to some good Republican newspaper, and find out what the facts really are. Many things have occurred to prove that the administration of Benjamin Harrison has satisfied the people, that they regard him as a man of sterling honesty and high ability, who has given the country a clean, pure, efficient and sufficient government.

"What about the tariff and its bearing on the present canvass?" the veteran statesman was asked.
"That Democratic Free Trade Plank," "As to that," replied Senator Sherman, as he moved in his chair, crossed his legs and smilingly addressed the interviewer, "of course, you know I am decidedly in favor of a protective tariff, that is a tariff act framed with a view not only to secure ample revenue for the support of the government, but with a distinct purpose to encourage and protect all productions which can be readily produced in our country. I do not believe that a tariff framed under the doctrine now announced and proclaimed by the Democratic party in its national platform can protect and foster our home industries. Mr. Tilden and the men of his school believed that the old doctrine of the Democratic party, proclaimed in former national platforms and supported by the declarations of Jefferson, Madison and Jackson, was a wise and constitutional exercise of national power. This doctrine has been abandoned and denounced by the Democratic platform recently adopted by the Chicago convention. A tariff framed in accordance with this new doctrine would be confined simply to levying revenue duties, excluding the idea of protection, and that is the purpose and object of the men who made the platform and of the men in the Democratic convention that adopted it by a large majority. Such a tariff might be levied exclusively on articles we cannot produce in this country, such as sugar, coffee and tea.

The Fairest and Best Tariff.
"I have believed that as to certain items in different tariffs we have gone beyond the line of protection which is necessary to foster American industries. A few rates have been adopted that I think will exclude competition between foreign and American productions, and secure a monopoly to the American manufacturers. This I do not believe to be a wise policy. There are some details of the McKinley tariff bill that may be subject to this objection, but on the whole, it is the fairest and best tariff not only for revenue but for protection, that has had a place on our statute books. The tariff plank of the Republican convention at Minneapolis is the clearest statement of the extent of protection favored by the great mass of Republicans of this country. The actual result of the McKinley bill has been not only to give to all American industries reasonable protection, but has increased our foreign trade, enlarged our exports and our imports, and greatly encouraged and aided to all kinds of American productions, whether of the field or of the workshop."

BISONS NOT YET EXTINCT.

At Least Four Hundred of Them Are Now in the National Park.

It has been very generally believed that the bison has become practically extinct, but that belief does not appear to be generally borne out by the facts, says the Great Divide. Not very long ago Capt. Anderson sent out Burgess, the civilian scout attached to the post in the National or Yellowstone park in Wyoming, to make a journey south of the Hayden valley. The purpose of the trip was to see whether any signs of ponchers could be found and also incidentally to discover what could be learned as to game in the open country to the south. The scout has lately returned and made his report, which is to the effect that there is an abundance of elk in the Hayden valley, but it is in respect to the bison that his discoveries are most encouraging.
In the Hayden valley he saw and approached quite close to several herds of bison, which he counted. One of these contained seventy-eight animals, a second fifty, a third one hundred and ten and a fourth fifteen. Besides these several single bisons were seen, and at quite a distance some other scattering groups which could not be counted. Mr. Burgess does not hesitate to say that he saw fully three hundred animals.

It is not to be supposed that at the time of this visit anywhere near all the bison in the park were collected in the Hayden valley, and it is altogether reasonable to believe that there are one hundred and perhaps three hundred other buffaloes in the park besides those which Mr. Burgess saw. Taking, however, the lowest number, there would be four hundred buffaloes in the National park at the present time. This is believed to be a conservative estimate, and to be considerably under the truth.

These bisons are to be divided into six classes—calves, yearlings, two-year-olds, three-year-olds, bulls and cows. This would give us at the lowest estimate from fifty to seventy breeding cows. While all these cows may not produce calves each year, they must represent an annual increase of at least thirty-six to forty head. This is taking the most unfavorable view of the number of cows and the rate at which they breed. Mr. Burgess is entirely disposed to think that the calf crop among the bisons of the National park this year will be from seventy-five to one hundred animals. However this may be, it is quite clear that there is in the National park, living under entirely natural conditions, and yet protected from attacks by man, a breeding stock of bisons sufficiently large to keep that reservation fully stocked for all time—a condition which cannot fail to be very gratifying.

REAL SEA SERPENTS.

The Horrible Character of Many of the Marine Monsters.
The seas from Madagascar to Panama and from Japan to New Zealand are thickly infested with marine snakes. Dr. Steinger, the reptilian expert of the Smithsonian institution, says that they are among the most poisonous of all known serpents, their venom being no less deadly than that of the cobra and rattlesnakes, says the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph. Furthermore, they are very fierce and aggressive, and will commonly attack human beings if they get a chance. They do not frequent the shallows, unless possibly for breeding, but live in the open ocean. When full grown they are from six to eight feet long.
Fishermen in the waters where they are found are greatly afraid of them. Their bodies are flat and the inside of them is almost wholly filled by the lungs, which are large, in order that they may be enabled to stay beneath the surface for a long time without coming up to breathe. They have eyes modified for seeing in the water, so that when they are taken out of their native element they seem blinded and strike wildly. Their fangs, like those of the cobra, are always erect.

Undoubtedly the giant squid, which has only become familiarly known to science within a few years, has frequently been mistaken for a sea serpent. In all qualities which can render a marine monster horrible this huge and frightful mollusk may be said to compare favorably with any creature of fact or fiction. When full grown it weighs ten thousand pounds, having a body fifty feet long, and two arms each one hundred feet in length, as well as eight smaller tentacles. A model of a diminutive individual, measuring only forty-two feet from the end of its tail to either tentacular extremity, is on exhibition at the National museum in Washington.
