In making its report the committee on evening schools recommended that the ome discussion over the attendance at evening schools Superintendent Freeman said that the greatest hindrance to the rening system is a lack of attendance. Last sesson 325 boys were enrolled, but

Mr. Freeman thought it would be a great advantage to the boys who show a disposition to learn if they could have a school by themselves. He thought it would be well to pick out such boys and give them a show by placing them under one of the best teachers. He favored the high school idea and he thought if some of the pupils reached the proper standard bookkeeping and similar, branches might the EVENING HERALD.

ENFORCING THE RULE.

President Conry Could not be Induced to Make Exceptions

President Conry, of the School Board, threw a bomb into the camp last night. When the time arrived to read bills be said, "The Secretary will read all bills that are properly signed." Mr. Muldoon jumped up and said, "Mr. Chairman: I have had a number of bills in my possession for over a week, as required emmittee have not had time to sign them. "I gave notice at the last meeting that I would enforce the rule," answered Mr. Coury. "No bills will be considered by this board until after the committee that incur them examine and sign them." Mr. Muldoon was very much embarrassed and Mr. Beddall tried to help him out by moving that the committees be empowered to examine the bills and if found correct the secretary have authority to issue orders

But Mr. Conry was obdurate. He ruled the motion out of order, and about forty bills slid over the table to await the next meeting of the board, which will not be held notil the first Wednesday of November. This rule does not cover the salaries of teachers, janitors, etc., and they will be bliged to wait a month,

His countrymen say he shot himself. Those who think the shot might have been by the rule, but the other members of the fired by another party say that if such was the case they believe it was purely acci-

Kreivenas lived but ten minutes after he bite. See 7

A HERALD reporter visited the saloon this morning and found it full of Poles and Lithuanians, but no business was going on. The bar was covered with sheeting to shut the bottles and other ornaments on it crowd who acknowledged that he could understand and speak English and he said he knew nothing of the shooting and dign't think anybody in the house did. He had heard that Kreivenas had shot himself. The deceased was 42 years of ago, he said, and left a wife and four children, The oldest child was 14 years of age.

'Squire J. J. Monaghan says that he got to the saloon immediately after the victim

John Rogers, Jr., was one of the men in Kreivenas and myself were shooting for the drinks. We stood in the bar-room and shot at a target that was put up in the dining room for the first time yesterday. Kopshinski and me best Kreivenss and he told his wife to set up the drinks. We went up to the bar and while waiting for the drinks talked about the horse show, said he would bet 25 cents be would win next time. A moment or two later we and pencilling the White street school methods of earning money were described found he was shot. We heard no noise, I don't know how he was shot. Frank Balebanick, a well known and intelligent Polish young man who is a member of the Grant Band, has made the following statement: "I had been in the yard. When I entered the kitchen I heard them shooting at the target. I was afraid to pass through the dining room for fear I would be shot, so I took a seat beside the stove in the kitchen to wait until they would get through. After they flaished and turned to the bar somebody shouted to me, 'Come and have drink, Kreivenas is stuck.' I passed into the dining room and met Kreivenas coming out of the bar room. He had his hand up to his mouth and as I thought he was about to womit I stepped aside to let him pass. I afterwards found he was shot."

'Squire Monaghan says he tried to get Kreivenas to make a statement, but he was dying and nothing could be gleaned. There is a strong belief that Kreivenas was accidently shot by some one in the bar room. There were two Flobert rifles in it the place and the question is who had charge of the second rifls when the drinking was going on. Some of the deceased's friends say he was in the habit of placing the stock of the rifle on the floor, with the muzzle of the barrel pointed towards his body, when he wished to push the hammer back. Both rifles were examined today and it was found that the hammers of 204 West Centre street, Hoffman's old both were imperfect. THE NOTE BOOK.

Some of the Topics That People are Talking About To-day.

It may interest some people to know that Big Joe" the most prominent of the survivors of the Jennesville mine herror of several months ago, is now working as a majon's laborer near Hexiston His efforts to make money as a dime museum freak failed completely, but he resolved never to work in the mines again. He pays frequent visits to friends in town, but is no more a figure of attraction.

It takes the campaign orators to pull out the people. I noticed on the streets Tuesday night people I had not met for several months and all were bound for the Republican mass meeting. They were not the men who hang to the coat skirts of the prominent politicians, but men of conservative character who devote all the time last night in his place they can to their homes. They were out seeking information on the issues of the day, and they got it.

He enumerated several novel uses to which the watch can be put and wound up by saying that it is useful for fishermen, firstly because it is a Waterbury, and secondly because when the fish swims up to the dial they find it is time to

I have been requested to ask the people of town to be on the lookout for William Lloyd, an old resident of Mineraville who has been missing for several days. He is a low-sized man, very gray, and barily able to walk. His family fears that he is from view. There was but one man in the wandering aimlessly about the county, or has met his death in some secluded spot.

An old housekeeper, who knows that she talking about, gives her impression as to the best way in airing bed clothes, &c. In airing beds the most thorough, careful housekeeper often errs through her very thoroughness. She will shake the sheets, blankers, etc., and bang them out of the window and over chairs, having them all expessed as much as possible to the direct rays of the sun and in the trongest breeze, was shot.
