HELD PRISONER OVER FOUR HOURS

After Considerable Wood Chopping and Other Heroic Measures the Steed Was Rescued.

HERE was a peculiar accident at the stable on Market alley, near Lloyd street, owned by M. L. Kemmerer, the confectioner. The victim was a horse belonging to Mr. Kemmerer, the confectioner, and it had a remarkable escape. The stable is located under the candy factory and the co-bins are kept in the cellar. In order to reach them it is necessary to raise a door in the floor of the stable and descend a flight of steps. The stalls where the horses are kept is but a few feet from the trap-door. Yesterday afternoon a stable boy backed one of the horses out of its stall and allowed it to stand near the trap-door while he went to get some harness. Meantime a boy from the candy factory raised the door and descended into the cellar to get a bucket of coal. The hostler then appeared with the harness and as he attempted to put the bridle on the horse it backed to the opening in the floor and went down into the cellar.

The opening was only about four feet long and two and a half feet wide, just large enough to let half of the animal's body down. The fore legs floundered in the air and the head and neck flopped from one side to the other, as the horse tried to free himself, but the rear half of his body was held as if by a vise. The boy in the cellar was terror-stricken when he saw his horse slip down, which he crawled to freedom, leaving the coal bucket behind. The hostler was equally scared and while yelling for help he tugged at the horse's neck, but his efforts were useless. Mr. Kemmerer then appeared upon the scene and men from the neighboring stables and blacksmith shops crowded about to make suggestions. The horse had tired himself and gazed helplessly at the crowd. "Where am I at?" could be read plainly in the large, beautiful eyes.

Plans of all kinds were suggested by men who knew something about horses and their rescue in cases of emergencies and by many who didn't. The horse was wedged so tightly many concluded that at least two of his legs were broken. Finally it was decided to cut away the flooring about the trap-door and hoist the animal. After considerable sawing and chopping, and four hours after the horse fell into the place, pulleys and ropes were put in position, and with the aid of a number of strong men, was hoisted up and once more placed upon his feet. Upon examination it was found that the animal was comparatively uninjured, having suffered only a few scratches, and notwithstanding the steps leading into the cellar were made of but one-inch board only one of them was broken.

"I've had a — of a time, don't you think?" the horse remarked to his hostler as he was being led to Titman's stable. "I should smile," was the hostler's answer.

Notes Concerning the Department Encampment to be held in February.

The first week in January will see all the newly elected officers throughout the department installed and then arrangements will be made for the encampment to be held at Lebanon in February. It will be an interesting session, as some very important matters bearing upon pension legislation will be considered. The representatives to this encampment from town will be C. T. Gibson, Joseph Daddow and H. C. Boyer. Messrs. L. Mangum and P. H. Hopkins, Sr., are the alternates.

Next year the soldiers' monument will be erected in town and an effort will be made to recruit the local Post to its full capacity, so as to make a creditable display when that event takes place. There are hundreds of veterans living in town and vicinity who do not belong to the organization who should take steps to connect themselves with it. The Grand Army of the Republic is one which every veteran should take pride in. They are all becoming old and infirm, and are dropping off fast. Those who go before should receive full military honors and place their widows and orphans under the sheltering wing of the organization. Delinquent members should also take new life and put themselves in good standing with the order; and dropped members should seek re-instatement.

"In union there is strength."

Thoughtful mothers never neglect to have a bottle of Dr. Cox's Wild Cherry and Seneke in the house. It is so good for Coughs and children subject to Croup.

NECROLOGY.

The funeral of the late John A. Nash at Pottsville yesterday attracted people from all parts of this and adjoining counties and was a very large one. Requiem high mass was held in St. Patrick's Catholic church. Rev. James Brehony, of Manayunk, was the celebrant; Rev. F. J. McGovern, Pottsville, deacon, Rev. M. F. Rooney, Pottsville, sub-deacon. The remains were interred in the Catholic cemetery No. 3. The pall bearers were Hon. James B. Reilly, E. D. Smith, Mason Weidman, John F. Whalen, P. M. Dunn, S. H. Kaercher, A. W. Schalek and M. P. McLaughlin. Gowen Post, G. A. R., headed the cortege and was followed by members of the Bar, county officials and relatives and friends.

The remains of Ebenezer Morris, an old and very prominent citizen of Mahanoy City, were interred in the Odd Fellows' cemetery at Tamaqua yesterday with Masonic honors. A special train of four cars took the funeral to Tamaqua.

Henry J. Neumann, Jr., son of H. J. Neumann, of Pottsville, and brother of Mrs. C. H. Hagabush, of town, died at his home in New York City on Monday. He was engaged in the hotel business in that city. The deceased was a resident of this town when his father was proprietor of the Merchants' hotel at the corner of Main and Coal streets.

Not Dead, But Sleeping.
Speaking of the Pennsylvania bridge matter the local correspondent of the Republican stretches a point to say "notwithstanding the ranting of oil town sheet the Council have come to the conclusion that they have the right end of this matter and are determined to settle the question not only by law but by force if it be necessary." It would be a blessing to the people if Council would get the right end of something. We advise them not to resort to force, but to take a philosophical view of the matter and profit by Pennsylvania Railroad troubles and litigations with other towns, where the people didn't even give the company a chance to steal in upon them: "like a sief in der nide."

Goods sold at Holderman's jewelry store from 25 to 30 per cent. less than elsewhere. 12-10-1f

THE ICY PAVEMENTS!

WALKING WAS A DANGEROUS TASK TO-DAY.

ONE SERIOUS ACCIDENT REPORTED

A Pole Broke His Leg at the Corner of Main and Centre Streets—He Was Carried Home by Friends.

PEOPLE who were obliged to walk upon the pavements and across the streets of town to-day found it difficult to navigate safely to their destinations. At no time during this winter have the pavements been so bad. The snow fall of yesterday, followed by the fall of sleet and rain and the freezing weather made them so treacherous that they defied the skill of a dancing master. The streets were like glass and more than one woman who contemplated paying a visit concluded to remain at home and not risk breaking a limb. Many of our citizens turned out early and cleared their pavements of the treacherous ice and snow, but a large majority did not possess this foresight and the consequence was that during the day a number of people involuntarily seated themselves upon the heartless cakes of ice.

One serious case was reported this morning. A Pole who attempted to pass over the crossing at the southwest corner of Main and Centre streets, slipped and broke his right leg in falling upon it. He was carried home by two companions.

Towards noon a thaw set in and the aerobic performances of the pedestrians ceased. The case above reported, fortunately, was the only serious one.

A commercial traveler suggested this afternoon that the borough authorities would act wisely in placing men at work cleaning crossings where travel is most frequent, and especially on Main street, where they slope on account of the grading of the electric railway.

Holderman's jewelry store, corner Main and Lloyd streets, is better stocked this season than any other competitor's in this town or county. 12-10-1f

ASHLANE.

The funeral of William McMurtrie, who died on Friday, after an illness of three weeks, took place from his late residence on Centre street, Monday morning. The remains were taken to St. Joseph's Catholic church where solemn requiem high mass was celebrated by Father Michael Rooney, of Pottsville. Father John Rooney, of Minersville, acted as deacon and Father Tannoyan of Centralia, as sub-deacon. Father John Rooney preached the sermon, speaking very feelingly of the deceased as a friend, a citizen, and as a christian. During all his life he always found time to serve and honor his God. Very beautiful floral offerings were scattered about the casket. The large attendance at the funeral showed the deceased's popularity throughout the county. We join his many friends in extending our sympathies to the bereaved widow and orphans. Miss Superintendent Keally, wife and family attended the funeral.

Senator B. J. Monaghan, of Shenandoah, paid a short visit to town to-day.

Will Gregory is busily engaged moving his household effects to Minersville, where he intends making his future home. Will has resigned his position here on the civil engineering corps to accept the Superintendency of the Leisenring colliery at Minersville.

"Jim" Kerschiner, one of the reporters of the Mahanoy City Tribune, spent Sunday in town.

George Mayer, formerly of this place, but now of Mahanoy City, Sundayed under the parental roof in town.

Rev. G. F. Patterson, who has been confined to his bed for the past few days, is slightly improved.

Misses Tessie Slattery, Mary Connors, Eliza Morrissey, Mr. and Mrs. John Reilly and Frank McGowan, of Shenandoah, returned to their homes after attending the McMurtrie funeral.

OBSE'S OBSERVATIONS.

What He Sees and Hears During His Travels.

The frequent cave-ins along the Lehigh Valley railroad in the vicinity of Packer No. 2 colliery, together with mention of the fact that watchmen are kept patrolling the sections where disturbances are expected, led one of our townsmen to remark that the operators should pull out the coal and let the places down at once. This, he thought, would save the people along the valley considerable anxiety. While down the valley on Monday I laid these contents before some of the people acquainted with mine affairs. One of them said, "It is well enough for outsiders to talk, but any sensible man who knows anything about mining affairs must be aware that we would be criminally liable if we allowed men to work in places so threatening as these are before they go down. They must have their own time and we cannot risk lives to hurry them."

While looking into this matter I also learned that there is something behind the cave-ins that is not generally known. It seems that the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company would prefer having the coal remain where it is so as to have no disturbance along its line and the landowners would leave the coal there provided the railroad company would pay for it. It is intimated that the company and landowners may eventually get together on some arrangement that will put a stop to the disturbances.

Another interesting item in connection with these cave-ins comes up in a different shape. When the cave-in occurred near the Lost Creek station about two weeks ago it was admitted that it broke one of the main pipes of the Lost Creek dam, but it was denied that the colliery had in any way suffered from water on account of the break. A gentleman who claims to speak upon excellent authority told me yesterday that the water did bother the colliery, but for some reason or other it was decided to keep the matter as quiet as possible. It was fortunate no one was in the mine. In speaking of this my informant said, "When I heard that this was a fact my mind at once rested upon what would be the consequence if a break should occur at the public water works which the borough of Shenandoah proposes placing above the Kehley Run colliery. And the more I thought of the matter the more convinced I became that the position taken by the Thomas Coal Company is a strong one. Did it ever strike you," continued my informant, "that should a break occur in the reservoir of the proposed water works, that after drowning the men in the Kehley Run colliery and reaching a certain height in those workings the water would rush on into the workings of Kohinor colliery through the many openings between the two mines and also down the men there? Such is the fact and I can demonstrate it to any one who may doubt what I say. And what strikes me as more peculiar is that two of the Councilmen who favor the site selected for the water works are required to be in the Kohinor mines almost at all times and would undoubtedly be among the victims in case the dreadful calamity foreshadowed should be realized." Lost a Hand.

William E. Brown met with a distressing accident at Centralia yesterday. He was employed as a brakeman on a Lehigh Valley coal train and while coupling cars had his right hand horribly crushed. He was brought here by a train and taken to the Miners' Hospital in a carriage by his brother-in-law, Letter Carrier Bartsch. At the hospital Dr. Biddle amputated the mangled member at a point midway between the wrist and elbow.
