BROUGHT BACK TO LIFE

Remarkable Case of Young James McLaughrey. HIS HEART HAD CEASED TO BEAT.

Wonderful Operation Performed by a New York Surgeon—A Boy Revived After He Was Seemingly Dead—He Is Gaining Strength Every Day.

New York, Dec. 23.—The medical profession is much stirred, so far as it is as yet familiar with the facts in the case, by the details of a remarkable surgical operation performed within a few days by Dr. Albert Shunk.

The feat accomplished is no less than the bringing back to life of a person practically dead, as the term is usually understood.

Among the many wonderful cases recorded in recent years, probably not one has been marked by features as unique as that of which James McLaughrey is to-day the living example. The patient is 13 years old.

The physician was called to the residence in the evening, and when he reached the house the patient had very marked symptoms of "Appendicitis."

The sufferer was doctored, as far as could be determined by precedents in similar cases. On the advice of the physician the family were advised of the gravity of the case, and when next morning a very sizable lump was observable over the seat of the inflammation, the diagnosis was fully justified and the trouble was exactly stated to be an abscess around the vermiform appendix.

An operation was at once recommended, but was delayed until the arrival of relatives who had been summoned in anticipation of the near approach of death.

Permission to proceed was then given, it being understood that in any event of failure to secure relief the end would not be hastened more than 15 minutes.

The patient was quickly placed on the table and while under the influence of a slight anesthetic an opening about eight inches long was made in the walls of the abdomen. From the incision there was at once a plentiful flow of pus.

No sooner had this taken place than the pulse ceased to beat, the heart stopped, the face dropped and every evidence of the most complete collapse stalked the presence of death. The glassy eyes upturned, the coldness of the extremities, and the death perspiration with which the body was covered, left no doubt in the minds of those present that the experiment had resulted fatally.

At this point the surgeon's tact was displayed. With one hand he tore open the wound, while with the other he emptied the contents of the pitcher of hot water into the abdominal cavity.

For a brief interval the fluttering renewal of the action of the heart was apparent only to the practiced medical eye, but soon the pulsation grew stronger, and ere long the patient gave unmistakable signs of returning consciousness. Then the eyes opened in a dazed sort of way, as if the subject was awakening from a deep sleep.

The action of the hot water having neutralized the effect of the ether that had been given, the patient was assisted to retain the ground gained by the administration of hypodermic injections.

With a new lease of life, there was a chance for the surgeon to look for the seat of the abscess.

After several fruitless efforts to do this, it was decided to remove a portion of the intestines. For better protection they were wrapped in a towel warmed by dipping it in hot water, and placed on the table by the patient's side.

Thus with room to work, the walls of the cavity were explored, the abscess sack being found and carefully removed. Then the seat of the trouble was reached and the foreign substance which had caused the inflammation of the appendix was removed.

The abdominal cavity was next thoroughly cleansed antiseptically, and after the pus had been washed from the exposed portions of the intestines they were returned to their place.

Before this was done, however, a drainage tube of about eight inches in length was inserted so as to lead to the lower bowels.

The wound was then closed and the sufferer left in charge of the surgeon's assistant and a trained nurse.

Remarkable as the operation is, it is still more marvelous that every day since the patient has gained in strength and is to-day convalescent.

Frequent examinations have been made of the progress of affairs in the patient's abdomen, and as fast as expedient the drainage tube is withdrawn, until now only about three inches remain in service.

MARRIED HIS DAUGHTER

England Startled By a Shocking Revelation.

TO BE AIRED IN A DIVORCE COURT. Alfred Clark, a Wealthy Society Man Made His Illegitimate Child His Wife—He Fused as Her Guardian—The Discovery Nearly Drives the Unhappy Girl Mad—Friends Take Up Her Cause.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Police society is just now discussing with bated breath one of the most shocking scandals of the man that have sullied its history.

The scandal had its origin in 1874, when Alina Marianne de Houghton, the unmarried daughter of Sir Henry de Houghton, Baronet, head of an ancient and noble family, was delivered in Milan, Italy, of a female child, the father of which was Alfred Aretius Clark, a wealthy man, who moves in the highest society and whose name figures in the Court Directory.

The birth of the child was kept a secret and the mother returned to society, nobody being the wiser as to her shame.

She married in January, 1876, an Irish gentleman of good family named Fitzgerald. She spent the greater part of her time until her death, a few years ago, on the Continent. Her betrayer, meanwhile had married. There is every reason to believe that the mother heavily dowered her daughter born in Milan.

She was married in January, 1876, an Irish gentleman of good family named Fitzgerald. She spent the greater part of her time until her death, a few years ago, on the Continent. Her betrayer, meanwhile had married.

This life, with occasional trips to neighboring places and a short school term at Clewer, near Windsor, continued until 1890, when the guardian's wife died. Some months afterward he proposed marriage to his supposed ward and actual daughter, and was accepted.

The marriage took place in London, and father and daughter thenceforward lived together as man and wife.

In March, 1892, the girl, then only 18 years of age, gave birth to a baby boy, and in July following the unhappy child-mother discovered that her guardian was not only her husband, but also her own father and father of her infant.

The awful discovery nearly deprived her of reason. She was practically friendless. The fact of the marriage had been kept a secret. Clark's own two legitimate daughters, with whom he resided in a charming mansion in Kensington, knew nothing of it, and he and his daughter-wife had lived in another house.

Every effort was made by Clark to coerce the girl into remaining with him, but she resolutely refused, and finally obtained the shelter of a family, some members of which had assisted in her education.

These people, after grave consideration, placed the matter before the Rev. Mr. Chichester, a gentleman well-known for his benevolence and probity, and he took the girl's cause into his hands.

It is believed that Clark relies upon the difficulty that exists of proving that he was other than the guardian of the girl, as the birth of the child in Milan in 1874, was, for obvious reasons, kept absolutely secret, and adequate legal proof of the fact will in consequence be very hard to obtain.

Clark is in London now, although there were rumors that he had fled the country.
