Princess Kospoff, with the jewels of the Princess gleaming upon her neck and bosom.

In court yesterday the young woman either acted a most consummate part, or else she was genuinely affected by her embarrassing position. When brought before Justice Grady she was on the point of breaking down.

The history of the young woman has not yet been fully investigated. Nothing is known about her husband. It is known, however, that she has been a professional nurse for some years and that she has been employed by the wealthiest families. She holds recommendations from some of the best physicians of the city. She speaks French, German and English fluently. She was for several months a professional nurse at the Insane Pavilion on Blackwell's Island.

Justice Grady, having no jurisdiction in the case, Mrs. Rickert was placed in the custody of J. W. Mattingly of the Washington police. He took her before United States Commissioner Shields in the Post-office building. The Commissioner asked her if she wished to return to Washington, and she replied that she did not know what to do. She finally consented to go with Detective Mattingly.
