EXPENSIVE manufreturers of Moscow, in Russin, are contemplating the removal of their works to Poland because of the skilled labor created by the forced emigration of the Liebrew working people. Native Russian labor is wholly incompetent to take their places and employers are compelled to remove their plants to points where the needed workers can be found. Of course such a migration of ospital and employment from the great Russian Industrial centers will be seriously felt, but it is a light penalty to pay for the lubuman persecution conducted by the government of the Caar against the Hebrew race.
