READING'S NEW STATION.

Trains Now Arrive and Depart from Twelfth and Market.

Trains are now running in and out of the Reading's magnificent new Market Street Station Philadelphia. It is expected that all the trains now running in and out of the station at Ninth and Green streets will come to the new station in a few weeks.

The new depot was dedicated to its purpose promptly at 4 o'clock Sunday morning, when Train Director Brown, of the Station, pulled open the throttle of engine 255, and train No. 159 rolled out of the mammoth trucks over the elevated road to the main line towards Reading.

The train was the Harrisburg and Shenandoah Express and was made up of four cars, baggage No. 518, smoker No. 300, passenger coaches Nos. 784 and 686, manned by Fulton Jones, conductor in charge; Daniel J. Harner, baggage master, and Brakemen J. J. Fitch and F. Connor. Engine 256 was held under control by Engineer Michael A. Welsh and the freeman was William C. Orth. Welsh has been in the employ of the company since 1872 and an engineer since 1887.

7:50 was the scheduled time for the arrival of the first train in the new depot, and a few moments before the foot of the locomotive was heard as the train approached, and the train itself came in sight towards Callowhill street. As promptly as the 4 o'clock train had taken its departure the 7:50 came to a stop on time. It was No. 126, the Reading accommodation, and consisted of engine 353, with the veteran Patrick Cassidy at the throttle, and Fireman Frank Gesser, baggage car and five coaches, manned by Conductor Howard Richards, baggage-master Michael Gillen and Brakemen Horace Lousand George W. Snyder. The train was crowded, as were the others which followed it during the day, until shortly after 6 o'clock at night. Many of the passengers rode out of curiosity in order to see the new depot and its elevated railroad approaches.

CHURCH MATTERS.

The M. E. Revival Services Very Successful. Rev. Powell's Sermon.

The revival services which have been held in the M. E. church since the new year began have been steadily increasing in interest and give promise of still greater results. On Sunday sixteen persons were received into the fellowship of the church, making, with those previously received, twenty seven who have been carried over the meetings began, to say nothing of the backsliders reclaimed and some who have not yet joined. The love feast in the morning was a season of great spiritual refreshment. The sermon which followed, on "Individual effort to bring sinners to Jesus," made a marked impression upon the congregation. And when those who would pledge themselves to renewed effort to bring at least one sinner to the Lamb of God during the coming week were asked to rise, a goodly number stood up.

In the evening chairs had to be placed in the aisles to accommodate the congregation. The sermon was from the text, "There is joy in heaven in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons which need no repentance." Luke 15, 7-10. This speaks to our heart. Its message concerns the intimate relation that exists between heaven and earth. God has only one great family—"the family in earth and in heaven." "Though now divided by the stream, The narrow stream of death."

When the baby of Bethlehem was born, the angels who announced the fact to the wondering shepherds were soon joined by "a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will toward men." Who knows how many glorified spirits of just men made perfect were among them? Certainly they do not cease their interest in us when they leave this world else why were Moses and Elias permitted to return and converse with Jesus upon the holy mount with reference to that which he was soon to accomplish at Jerusalem—"which things the angels desire to look into."

In your celestial sphere, where life is seen in its true perspective, what are the inventions of Edison, the victories of Grant, the achievements of Lincoln, the fortunes of Vanderbilt, the patriotism of Washington the Empire of the Ussars compared with the penitence of a broken-hearted prodigal who coming to himself and realizing his desperate plight, says, "I will arise and go to my Father." This is the only thing that still the harmonies of heaven. Here is a mother whose wayward son left home in disgrace. He has been a companion of drunkards and gamblers. She has given him up for worse than dead. One day she responds to a knock at the door and there he stands clothed in his right mind. He found the Saviour in a little country church where his name had been a terror and he has come home to tell mother about it. The gift of a Continent would be a paltry nothing to the mother compared to the recovery of her boy.

The parable of the lost sheep pictures the pity of the shepherd for the miseries of the lost, and the parable of the lost coin pictures the sense of loss which has been sustained by the disappearance of the missing treasure. Both together they express the divine solicitude for sinners; not only on account of the misery of the sinner but on account of the loss which heaven suffers by their estrangement. We often pity sinners because of the terrible doom they are counting but who pities the sinner's Saviour who died to save him and who is defrauded of his claim? We may pity the prodigal, but what of his poor father?

The joy of heaven over repentant sinners is not restricted to the angels of God. Angels are not the only inhabitants of heaven. John tells us that he saw "a great multitude whom no man could number, who had come up out of great tribulation and washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." And if the veil should be drawn, and our eyes should be opened to-night we should doubtless see husbands or wives, parents or children, brothers or sisters or friends looking with longing desire for the decision you are about to make. And as one and another decides for God we should see that the joy in heaven is in the presence of the angels. Shall it thrill the spirit of that father or mother you promised to meet in heaven?

"The Limited Mail."

There was a liberal crush at Ferguson's theatre last night to witness the performance of Elmer E. Vance's "Limited Mail." When the theatre arrived to open the doors, the pavement and street in front of the theatre was paved by a seething mass of humanity, all eager to gain admittance. It was at least 5:30 before the people were all in. Mr. Vance has grasped one of the essential points in the presentation of any play and carries it out, namely: careful attention to the minutest details in stage-setting, and other managers would do well to follow his example. The play was very good, and every one appreciated the magnificent vestibule train which crossed the stage. The sawmill scene was very realistic and did not require any extraordinary effort of the imagination to make the spectator think he was in a real saw-mill. Little Deatrice is one of the best contortionists that has ever appeared here. The rest of the company ably sustained their parts.
