Minister Stevens, who, in response to the request of the provisfor all government, assumed the remoned billsy for these acts, appears to be an American of the right sort.

Before the American protectorals was assumed all the representatives of foreign countries had re-ognized the provisional government. The transfer by the latter of responsibility to the United States was peacefully accomplished with the concurrence of the great body of foreigners.

Letters from Honolulu say that when the revolution broke out the Queen's Cabinet asked the American Minister to assist the government in suppressing it, or to at least remove the United States forces that had been landed from the Boston upon the island. With this request the American Minister properly refused to comply.
