Washington, March 4.—From daybreak this morning the city has been in an up-roar. The chousands of visitors seem to completely awallow up the permanent evidents, and, although they are used to xciting times during changes of adminstration, they seem bewildered by the miense excitement of the visiting deleutions of Democrats, each apparently mleavoring to outdo the other in the art of making noise.

Column upon column of men, from East, West, North and South, paraded brough the streets long before the resident-elect had arisen, arousing the Washingtonians from their peaceful, hough brief, slumbers, many being sappy to have caught even two hours' sleep during the night, for far into the wee, sma' hours" of this morning the Amourats contined the jubiles

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

As the time for the formation of the taugural procession approached, Pennsylvania avenue, along the entire line, of merch, began to fill up, slowly at first unirely, began to fill up, slowly at first but with increasing swiftness as the thousands of latecomers pushed and jos-tied each other in the andsavor to reach some coign of vantange.

An hour or more before the time ap-pointed for the store of the prade ar-rived, the great thoroughfars of Wash-ington was a solid mass of humanity too lightly wedged together to move, with carcely room enough to breaths.

It was almost a matter of impossibility o make progress on the sidewalks, and those who wished to move from one those who wished to move from one point to another were glad to take the middle of the street, although it was still ankle-deep with the slush churned into mud from yesrerday's storm.

That strange sound, almost indescribable, which always precedes an expected event pervaded the air like the low and idistinct murmur of the sea upon petibly beach on a calm day in the lazy summer time. What it signifies is also hard to tell. It seems to be a mixture of ontiones, annoyance and excitement, trary to expectation, and the large ics of police had little to do in the tier of arrests, but were very busy in of the lines of people on either of the avenue from closing together a solid pholons. At the reviewing stand the crowds ers packed more closely and were more monstrative than at any other point. One slight change in the programme was adopted by the inaugural committee to the had mounted at the suggestion of ir. Circuissed.

Downs intended to have had the Presi-the was in the procession at the southeast southeast to the White House grounds, it unted at the corner of Pennsylvania venue and Pitteenth street, so that he might recall the reviewing stand in time in see the hend of the procession pass.

By Mr. Cleveland's plan, however, he passed the reviewing stand in his carriage and left the line at Executive avoice, half a block further on, and marking the western entrance. western entrance It is understood that Mr. Cleveland secured this change to gratify Mrs. Cleve land, whose position in a building on Fifteenth street, facing the northern part of the avenue, would not allow her to see her husband if he left the line at the place selected by the inauguration com-olities.

The scenes about the city have been of a most animated description all day and this afternoon shows no abatement. A constant stream of arrivals has been issuing from the rallway stations all morning and the marching music of many of the organizations has kept the air vibrating melodionely. It took but a few short hours to convert the National Capital into one great camp, of ermet men. Regiment after regiment and olut after child poured into the city. Fife and horn, the clarion bugle, and the big tessedrum were heard frequently and buster make.

But few errors were made in the for mation of the great parade and three were only of trivial moment, not interfering in the least with the smooth working of the programme. Some of the brigades failed to arrive at their posts time, but the sides soon brought then

With banners flying and bands playing fively airs the bond of the first column proper passed the reviewing stand shortly after Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Harrison and reached the places assigned to their

MESS CLEVELAND

The military presented a fine appear or, their marching was in splendien, and they received the plandits of all Washington as they passed along the presed avenue, no which the victorious irmies of the Union had possed in 1865 in the grandest review known to history. Many of the G. A. R. men remembered well the time, and, while speaking of those glorious days their marching be-came firmer and their beaving more suidierly. They and also something to say in low voices of their well belowed commanders—Grant, Sheridan, Sherman —who have passed away since then, walt-ing for the last roll call.

The column was composed of two grand divisions, the first grand division being divided into four sub-divisions, and the second into six sub-divisions, and each mb-division consisting of two or mor

General Martin T. McMahon, grand Marshall, Col. W. L. Whipple, A. A. G. U. S. A., chief of staff, Col. H. C. Cooper, A. A. G., U. S. A., adjutant general; and special aldes. Then came the in-comand special aldes. Then came the in-coming and the out going presidents, scated together in Mr. Harrison's carriage, followed by the members of the cabinet also in carriages. These were followed by a delegation of the New York business men's Cleveland and Stevenson Club representing the different business exchanges in New York City.

Then came the first sub-division, commanded by Brig. Gen. Brook, U. S. A., followed by his staff. The first brigade of this sub-division was composed of United States troops under the immediate command of Col. Livingston and staff. The artitlery with their gargeons
