THE BEST BLOOD MEDICINE

Is the best Blood Medicine, because it assists nature to throw off the impurities of the blood, and at the same time, tones up the entire organism. This is just what is needed in the various poisons, such as scurvy, syphilis, etc., which settle up the impurities in the system, thus producing muscular weakness and suffering. Therefore, the best blood medicine is the best.

her husband, and of too delicate a nature to endure the hard life the Connecticut farmers must do. She was pronounced by the Plainfield doctor to have successively "a spine in the back," a "rising of the lungs" and a "gittical complaint of the lights" (was it catarrh?). Daily she was blistered, plastered and fomented, dosed with Brand's pills, miller root in cider, tansy, burdock, bitter-sweet, castor and borage; tea: dried rattlesnake's flesh, and the powder of a red squirrel's tail into a red hot oven, baked until powdered, and then put through that process in a mortar, and administered fasting.

Dearly beloved, I am not improving. All these, and sundry other and fiftier medications, which I refrain from mentioning, did once, perhaps do still, abound in the islands of this Yankee land, and slay their thousands yearly, as with the jaw-bone of an ass.

"Good-by, Josh!" said her tender voice, fainting as it spoke, and with one upward rapturous look of the soft brown eyes, she closed forever and her head fell back on Josh's shoulder, dead.

"Oh Lord! she's dead," said he, as if he alone of all the world knew it.

"Yes, my son, she is dead," solemnly replied the parson. "It is the will of God and you must be content."

"No—there was no consoling Uncle Josh; that touch of nature showed it. He was alone, and refused to be comforted; so Parson Pitcher made a fervent prayer for the living, that unaware merged into thanksgiving for the dead, and went his way sorrowfully convinced that his holy office had in it no supernatural power or aid, and that some things are too deep and too mighty for man.

"Good morning, Mr. Crane," said the good divine.

"Morning, Parson Pitcher, how's a cheer?"

The parson sat down on the bench of the steps, and a little surveyed Josh, wondering how best to introduce the subject of the loss, but refractory willow-weep gave no sign, and at length the parson spoke.

"I can't help it," exclaimed Josh, flinging down a finished peg emphatically. "I a'n't resigned! I want Miss Eunice. I a'n't willin' to have her dead, I can't and I a'n't, and that's the whole on't! and I'd a—sight rather—oh goodly! I've sworn again, Lord-o-massy; I a'n't a'n't here to look at me when I do, and I'm goin' straight to the d—, Oh land! there it goes! oh dear soul, can't a feller stop himself nobow?"

And with that Josh burst into a passion of tears, and fell past Parson Pitcher into the barn, from whence he emerged no more till the minister's steps were heard crunching on the gravel path toward the gate, when Josh, persistent as Galileo, thrust his head out of the barn window, and repeated in a louder and more strenuous key, "I a'n't willin', Parson Pitcher!"

to new your way, and you're got to new mine, so it's pooty clear that I shall fog you to rope-yard, or else you'll hev to make believe my way's yours, which'll suit all round." So you see, Parson Pitcher, I wa'n't a-join' to put myself in a way to quarrel with the Lord's will agin, and I don't expect you to hev no such trouble with me twice as you've had since Miss Eunice up an' died. I swan I'll give up reasonable next time, seein' it's fall!"

Hardly could Parson Pitcher stand this singular creed of doctrine, or the shrewd and self-satisfied, yet honest, expression of face with which Josh declared his argument. Professing himself to great haste to study, he promised to publish as well as to marry Josh, and when his old persecutor was out of hearing, indulged himself with a long fit of laughter, almost indistinguishable, over Josh's patient Christianizer.

Great was the astonishment of the whole congregation on Sunday, when Josh's intentions were given from the pulpit; and strangely mixed and hesitating the congratulations he received after his marriage, which took place in the following week. Parson Pitcher took a curious interest in the success of Josh's project, and had to acknowledge its beneficial effects, rather against his will.

Sall Ran was the best of house-keepers, as school are apt to be; or is it in reverse that the rule began? She kept the farm-house Quakerly clean, and every garment of her husband's scrupulously mended and refreshed; but if the smallest profanity escaped Uncle Josh's lips, he did indeed "hear thunder," and with the ascetic devotion of a Goyonist, he endured every obnoxious remark to the end, though his soft and kindly heart would now and then cringe and quiver in the process.

It was all for his good, he often said, and by the time Sall Ran had been in Miss Eunice's place for an equal term of years, Uncle Josh had become so mild-polite, so kind, so meek, that rarely his dead wife must have rejoiced over it in heaven, even as his brethren did on earth.

And now came the crowning honor of his life. Uncle Josh was made a deacon. Sall celebrated the event by a new black silk frock, and added Parson Pitcher home to tea, as is the great glory of a New England housekeeper. Pies, preserves, cake, biscuit, bread, short-cake, cheese, honey, fruit, and cream were pressed, and pressed again, upon the untidy parson, till he was quite in the condition of Charles Lamb; and the omnibus, gladly saw the signal of retreat from the table, he withdrawing himself to the bench on the stoop, to breathe the odoriferous June air, and stalk over matters and things with Deacon Josh, while "Mrs. Crane cleared off."

Long and plausibly the two worthies talked, and at length came a brief pause, broken by Josh.

"Well, Parson Pitcher, that here calculation of mine about Sall did come out nigh onter right, didn't it?"

"Yes, indeed, my good friend!" returned the parson; "the trial she has been to you has been really blessed, and shows most strikingly the use of discipline in this life."

"Yes," said Josh, "if Miss Eunice had lived, I don't know but what I should have been a swainish man to this day; but Sall, she's rated it out of me; and I'm gettin' real resigned, too."
