A Hoag.
Representatives Losh and Kennedy each received a letter in the same mail, from the same constituent, requesting a pass to Philadelphia and return, and to be sure to send a "Bird Book." They however learned just as they were about making applications for the passes, that Representative Cooper had just forwarded a pass and Bird Book to the very same individual. Is it any wonder that our Representatives complain at times, about being annoyed and importuned by unreasonable and hoggish demands and requests like these?—Ashtand Local.

Judge Henry H. Goldsborough, Baltimore Md., says: "It gives me pleasure to recommend Dana's Serraparilla to any one suffering from rheumatic or other pains."

Wanted.

ADVERTISING FOR CAPITAL.

Colonel Mulberry Sellers Outdone in Philadelphia.

For years the theatrical patrons of this country roared with laughter over the late John T. Raymond's impersonation of Colonel Mulberry Sellers in "The Gilded Age," in which the Colonel made famous the cry "There's Millions in it." The play hinged on the efforts of an inventor to secure capital for placing an article upon the market with assurances of fabulous returns. Raymond is dead and "The Gilded Age" is on the shelf, but Colonel Sellers still lives and may be met any day in Philadelphia. His address may be secured any time by answering one of the many advertisements that appear in the "Business Opportunities" columns of the Quaker City papers.

Two prominent men of this town are amusing their friends by telling of what followed an adoption of this plan—seeking the Colonel.

The pair left here a short time ago to transact business in Philadelphia. Arriving in the city they found the weather extremely cold and decided to postpone their business and remain within the friendly shelter of a hotel until the next day. While in their room trying to devise some pleasant method for passing time one of the gentlemen suggested that answers be sent to some of the "business opportunities" ads in the morning papers. The suggestion was adopted and within a few minutes a score or more postal cards were dropped into a letter box bearing messages to this effect: "Dear Sir—Meet me at the hotel to day between the hours of 4 and 8 p. m."

In the afternoon our two townsmen were ready for the calls. It was agreed that one should act as door-tender, while the other would assume the dignified bearing of a capitalist loaded down with wealth for investment. Promptly at 4 o'clock there was a rap at the door, which opened and the caller was introduced to the "capitalist." The new comer was a tall gentleman of dignified bearing. The advertisement he had inserted read:

PARTNER WANTED.—A good business man for the World's Fair. Address, "C," 125, —off 2c.

The advertiser proceeded to divulge his scheme, which was to secure a partner who would assist him in inducing people who intended visiting the World's Fair to subscribe to a plan by which each would secure a round trip railroad ticket, board and lodging and admission to the fair ground every day during a limited visit for $42.

The seeker explained that he had a partner to go into the scheme, but, unfortunately, a few days before the partner stepped in front of a train and lost both legs, hence it became necessary to seek new blood. All the new partner would be required to invest, $600, would cover the cost of his interest. "But what am I to make out of it?" asked the capitalist. "Oh, you! yes—ahem—you see, you come in this way: Say you sell 1,000 tickets, the profit on each ticket will be $2.50—that will make a total profit of $2,500, and that we divide, see? Big scheme, and I'm the first to get on to it." It was agreed that the "capitalist" have until the next day to consider the matter and there being another knock at the door the World's Fair manipulator was ushered out.

Visitor No. 2 represented the authorship of $25,000—New business. Gentleman with some capital wanted. A good paying investment.

He was an easy going, pleasant, rather good looking and apparently intelligent fellow. He produced a type-written prospectus covering a number of pages, setting forth the virtues of a new process for manufacturing mortar for building purposes. $100,000 was required for the plant, but $25,000 would give it a good start. The details were set forth in full and everything was "cut and dried" for the management. The president of the company could draw a salary of $5 per day, the superintendent $3, secretary $5, engineer $3, and laborers $2 per day. If the "capitalist" invested the presidency and superintendency could be consolidated and that would make the office worth $11 per day. The investment would pay about 10 per cent. Of course, until such time as more capital could be secured and the plant commenced to make productions the salaries would be paid out of $25,000 sought. The "capitalist" didn't take kindly to this and the visitor suggested that if the mortar business did not meet with favor the money could be invested in the manufacture of a new fire truck. Cuts produced showed a truck with combination ladders, with a man sitting on top driving a team of horses as if going to a fire. Another cut showed the ladders shooting up into the air to a level with the several stories of a building and walk-ways stretching from the ladders to the windows. The visitor left a copy of the plans and was bowed out.

Caller No. 3 had waited several minutes in the hallway and had lost none of his patience, but he explained that he had plenty in space and would have put up with a wait of an additional hour to have an opportunity of ventilating the merits of his colorless exsuvator. He was summarily disposed of and he went out uttering something about some d—n fools not being able to tell a good thing when they saw it.

No. 4 wanted money with which to manufacture hair pins warranted to hold on to the hair like grappling irons, but his undertaking was not considered big enough.

A gentleman who seemed to be a lawyer wanted some one to purchase a half or controlling interest in a well (?) paying printing establishment with large contracts for special work of medicine men. The brother-in-law of the caller was the owner of the plant and was obliged to meet a mortgage of $1,500. That amount would have to be paid down and the balance could be paid on easy installments. The "capitalist" thought there was too much "well" business about this.

Another caller had a coal saver. His explanation of it cannot be given now, but it was a "dandy." $500 would be required to put it in shape and within six months half the coal mines would be thrown idle by it and the operators would be obliged to buy up the patent or become look canvassers. A sample of the saver was left for trial. The hotel porter sprinkled it on the icy pavement in front of the hotel and was heard saying, "Golly, but dat melts de ice quick."

A fellow with a radiant nasal organ that looked like the large end of a carrot wanted money with which to start a Keely cure establishment. He guaranteed patients in blocks of twenty every third day; expensed a willingness to superintend the institution, and offered to share the profits with the investor. He asked $10 down for a refusal. He got the refusal.

So the callers kept coming and going all afternoon and at one time they came so fast that they threatened to force the door. After 7 o'clock the hall was packed and becoming tired of the game our townsmen slipped out a side door and took in the winter dress, with one thing learned, and that in the "business opportunities" columns of the city papers contain few jewels and people who handle them must be extremely cautious to avoid being nipped.

Because it is a labor-saver, and makes less noise than any machine on the market. Pay no attention to the disparaging talk of our competitors, as that only proves that it is their most dangerous rival. Call and see it for yourself.

After the Delinquents.
Deputy Tax Collector Higgins and Constable Boland were at the Lehigh Valley depot bright and early this morning watching for two Hungarians they heard were about to leave town without paying their taxes. One of the Hungarians was caught by Boland, but the other got wind of the situation and started eastward along the Lehigh Valley railroad. Deputy Higgins gave chase, but had to travel to Park Place before he got the man. The delinquents were put in the lockup, but later in the day they settled up.
