UP WITH THE FLAG.

Ever ready to trim its sails to which-Ever ready to trim resears to which ever way the wind blows, the New York World, in an editorial headed "Raise That Fiag," condemned in no uncertain terms the act of the "bluntwitted Commissioner" who lowered it in Hawaii. It is peculiarly significant of the drift of public sentiment when ing the big Brooklyn bridge. The bright such an erstwhile ardent admirer and supporter of the Administration finds it policy to rebuke the President and which they did and the uniforms were lost his Envoy Very Extraordinary, Mr. sight of for a time. Blount, of Georgia. Desirous of gelting in out of the wet, The though tardly, states that "no one through the flast to review it. He emwho has fought for that flag or who would now fight for it likes to see it lowered." Strange as it may seem, there are still some people who can look unmoved upon such a spectacle; but as a vast majority of the World's 375,000 readers presumably live north of Mason and Dixon's line, the enterprising journal is too wily a bird to take that view of it. But what The World means by recalling its opposition to"the scheme for taking into the sisterhood of states, either forcibly or otherwise, this far-away habitation of mongrel Japs, Chinese and Kanakas" it is difficult to understand. When was "the scheme" ever broached? The most sanguine and enthusiastic adherent of the provisional government could hardly have ever dreamed of such a thing; surely he never expressed it. It is not so hard, however, to understand why The World should now favor "a territorial form of ing taken the distinguished guests on hoard government, or perhaps a strong and midst the waving of several signals from government, or perhaps a strong and exclusive protectorate." That is all that hus ever been asked for, and the astute editor, noting the sympathles of his readers, simply takes a round-about tack and gracefully falls into
