LIZZIE BORDEN'S TRIAL.

Having Difficulty to Secure the Twelve Jurymen.

ELEVEN MEN ALREADY IN THE BOX.

Intense Interest Shown in the Proceedings—The Lawyers Who Are Conducting the Case—The Trial Began With a Prayer—The Accused Woman Before the Bar.

New Bedford, Mass., June 6.—The long delayed trial of Lizzie Borden which began yesterday with the securing of a jury is being continued this morning with an attempt to secure the twelfth juror.

LIZZIE BORDEN.

The taleman began to file into their places at 10 o'clock, and at 11 all were there, and were checked off, given numbers by the clerk, and awaited the coming ordeal with becoming fortitude.

At precisely 10:58 Miss Lizzie A. Borden, the prisoner, came slowly into the room, preceded by Deputy Sheriff Kirby, and was shown to her seat in the dock. She was attired in a very becoming costume of black brocaded stuff and wore a pretty shade that relieved by a touch here and there of blue.

At 11:05 the court house bell sounded, but there was no movement on the part of the court except to call Mr. Moody into the room of the justices, where with the district attorney a short consultation was held.

Chief Justice Mason, who with Judges Blodgett and Dewey, will sit at the trial, says that he thinks it possible under these conditions to complete the jury within two or three days at most.

Miss Borden is still far from strong. Two weeks ago she had a severe attack of the grip, and was threatened with pneumonia. She practically got up from a sick bed to come and stand trial for her life.

Mr. Jennings, the senior counsel for Lizzie, is a young man, as is also Mr. Adams. It was Mr. Jennings who had charge of Lizzie's interests at the preliminary hearing. He was a conspicuous defender and lobbyist in Brown University.

By all odds the most striking figure among the lawyers for the defense is Gov. George D. Robinson. He has for five years been conspicuous in Massachusetts politics and at the State Bar.

The court came in precisely at 11:27. Chief Justice Mason taking the center seat with Rev. M. C. Julian, of New Bedford, who had been selected to make the regulation opening prayer, on his extreme left.

As soon as they were seated Deputy Sheriff Thomas W. Butman was instructed by Clerk Borden to make the usual proclamation to the taleman, or when the clerk called them in alphabetical order.

Then the District Attorney conveyed officially to the court what has been well known for a week or so, that the Attorney General will not be here to attend to his duty and that Mr. Wm. H. Moody, District Attorney of Essex county, would act.

Chief Justice Mason then addressed the taleman as a body, stating that he should be obliged to get certain questions to them as they came before the court, relative to forming opinions, their bias or prejudice, etc.

Miss Borden was asked to stand up and read her right to challenge. The first juror was Ansel G. Baker, of New Bedford, who said he did not think any evidence which could be produced would induce him to change his mind, and he was told to step aside.

George Potter, of Westport, had formed an opinion, but did not think it was sufficient to prevent being changed. There was no challenge, and he was duly sworn and placed in the box.
