GO AL MINING.

A Comparison . Wade Between Mining to This Con stry and England.

It is interesting to note what visitors to this suntry, who are now here or have recently been here to view the wonders at the World's Pair, have to say of America and its industries. Emerson Hainbridge, of London, has given his observations in regard to coal mining, which are reproduced for the benefit of our readers. The conclusion he has come to from information and observation is that the American mining industry is very much as the English coal industry was thirty or forty years ago. That is to say, Americans are able to do a large quantity of mining at shallow depths in the bill sides, working seams of omsiderable thickness, and they are able to bring to bear upon this kind of mining, which 7-19 lm has almost ceased to exist in England, all the experience and appliances of the last thirty years. The result is that a number of miner are producing coal at a cost, including every thing, of about 3s 6d per ton, which is far below the average of the best English collieries Mr. Balubridge thinks it is at present premature to refer to the general conclusions he ar rived at with regard to the development of mining machinery, but, generally speaking he went back satisfied with the comparison by was able to draw between England and the United States. Unless the present high cost of producing coal in England is brought down. Mr. Bain bridge has little doubt that America will gradually develop the exportation of machinery to foreign countries, and that corespondingly England, which has long held the foremost place in this respect, will fall away. The general result of Mr. Bainbridge's equiries with regard to the working classe in America is that the margin between their carnings and expenses enables them to have more of the necessaries of life in spite of the extremely high cost of rent and clothes; but whilst the wages are decidedly higher, in nany cases double what are paid in England, the workmen and workwomen have very long hours, and work very hard for the wage hey get.

The party got into power through its promises to revise the pension and tariff lists, and as they claim the old soldier element is dying fast and is being replaced by a new and larger generation which considers the old soldier has had snough, it dare not take a backward step. Grand Display of

FINE DRESS GOODS

RESS GOODS is such a bewildering topic that we will not attempt a full description, but give a partial outline, which you can fill in by a personal inspection. There are the plain and changable diagonals; plain, plaid, striped and invisible plaid serges; fancy mixtures in all sorts of odd weaves, dots, threads, cross-threads, hair-lines, lines here and there, many at a glance appearing alike, but upon examination are found entirely different. Our assortment of silks is complete-china silks, china surah, plain surah, bengaline, plain, figured and changeable silks, in all the new shot effects. Full line of fancy braids to match any color of dress goods.

We find the most stylish andIn Wraps the prevailing mode to be the Cape, in some of its variations, single, double or triple capes. Some are plain, others very highly decorated, with fancy indescent braid, butterfly colors, or some full arrangement at the neck, so much approved this season by the feminine fancy. To some, coats only are the correct garment. To those we would say coats are equally fashionable and stylish, many of these having capes also attached-sometimes one, two or three, as the taste or inclination of the wearer may desire.

We have this season, for the first time, added a Millinery Department, and have spared neither trouble nor expense to make it a success. The result exceeds our most sanguine expectations. This department will be under the same management and conducted on the same principles that have always characterized our entire business. We shall keep everything in trimmed and untrimmed hats, novelties of every description. Having secured a trimmer noted for her artistic and skillful work, we are enabled to suit all tastes. We invite a careful inspection of our entire store. All welcome,
