ANNIHILATING AN INDUSTRY.

What Judge Pershing's Decision Means to This County.

Up in Schuylkill county, where the full effect of Judge Pershing's decision affecting the recompense of Deputy Coroner's fails, there will be universal grief at the sad times that have fallen upon that industrious class. It took some years to develop what might be called the inquest industry of that county, but it was one of the most profitable things of its kind that ever flourished at the expense of the public. The man who filled the chief office five or six years ago is generally believed to have "sat" upon everything resembling a body that the gracious winds of heaven sent within sight of his office. In one term he saved enough to migrate to another state, which he was popularly thought to have bought out of some of his incidental profits. His successor was still more indefatigable. Tradition says that the objects on which he sat did not even have to resemble a human form, and the bills which he was in the habit of presenting from month to month bore out at least a part of the tradition. To annihilate this industry by first increasing the population so that Schuylkill came within the scope of the salary law and then force it into the notice of a judge who objected to considering the county treasury as an annex of the Coroner's office was a cruel thing to do, but there is no help for it now. Perhaps after all it would be better to impeach the court. The Coroners cannot live on air.—Phila. Inquirer.

A GAY GONDOLIER.

Divinely picturesque and eminently attuned to their artistic environment, reflecting the beauty of the cameo setting of the magnificent palaces lining the shimmering lagoons, the gondoliers are a feature eminent among the novel alluring spectacles at the great exposition.

Chicago's erratic knight of the barometer and the festive forecast having graciously meted out an acceptable article of weather from his treasure house during the last few days, the gay gentlemen from Venice have been given an opportunity to shine resplendent in all their finery of raiment and bask in the smiles of fair maidens reclining on the cushions of the gondolas, who see in each handsome wielder of the long oars a possible duke or count.

The weather being as near an approach to the Venetian article as the gondoliers have yet experienced, they were in a particularly bright and happy mood. Before the crowd arrived to distract their minds with the seductive jingling of hard and shining coins they reclined in the sunshine near the piers where their fairy-like craft are moored, rolled cigarettes, listened dreamily to the music floating over the lagoon from the bandstands and discussed the comparative merits of gondoling and running peanut stands.

From all that could be gathered from scraps of the conversation, the sentiment was unanimous in favor of the former.

Standing on one of the bridges and watching the boats glide so smoothly along, with the parti-colored hangings trailing in the clear waters and the gay gondoliers softly singing in time to the rhythmic sweep of the oars, one would think that the romantic-looking oarsman lived in a Venetian palace, with its thresholds touching the water and its latticed casements half-concealing divers and various dark-eyed Italian beauties, to whom, in accordance with the tradition and romance, the gondoliers, when off watch, would offer their hearts and hands in rounded verse to the accompaniment of lute, a guitar or at least a harmonica.

But they don't.

Down on the west bank of the south pond stands a lowly frame cottage, rough and unpainted. The most romantic observer would never for a moment connect it with the trailing oars or softly splashing water. It is more redolent of the soil, more suggestive of the festive lumber shover or the equally unostentatious sewer-digger. And here the gondoliers live, move and have their being.

Shortly after the gilt head of Diana had begun to glisten in the sunlight this morning a gondolier stepped out of the cottage and walked to the edge of the lagoon. He wore not the gay livery which illumes the gondolas later on, merely an undress uniform and a pensive air of melancholy. As he gazed at the water it was evident that he was filled with a wild longing to undress even more yet and try a plunge in the lagoon. At length his determination became fixed, he hastily disrobed and a moment later took a flying leap into the water, instantly and irrevocably fracturing regulation "No. 14867" for the guidance of visitors and employes. Any one wishing to use water in any form on the fair grounds must use that furnished by a concessionaire from Wisconsin or incur the dire penalty of walking behind a Columbian guard for some distance and possible incarceration in the cold-storage building or the Chinese theater.

Hardly had the splash made by the audacious gondolier died away when there was a run on the bank and a guard was on hand.

"Come out of that, now, yez murtherin' dago, or I'll run yez in," was his salutation.

The gondolier grinned and quietly replied: "Si, Caleimino Re Illustre elochio este boulevarda," or words to that effect.

STATE NEWS OF A DAY.

An Injunction Granted in the Philadelphia Public Building Suit.

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—The special injunction prayed for by the public building commission to restrain the city from taking possession of the public building under the Penrose bill, passed by the legislature, was granted late yesterday afternoon by the supreme court. Four of the justices favored the injunction. They were Sterrett, Green, Clark and Williams. McCollum, Mitchell and Thompson dissented. This does not necessarily settle the controversy, but the general opinion is that the granting of the injunction is a positive indication of the opinion of the majority of the court as to the constitutionality of the Penrose bill. There was no opinion filed, and the reasons for the action are, therefore, not made public. The claim for the injunction was made on the ground that the Penrose bill was unconstitutional for various reasons. The building commission people are especially jubilant. They do not expect the legislature to go any further.

A Furnace Attached.

SHARON, July 20.—Sheriff Barnett, of Mercer, at the instance of Attorney Ingersoll, of Cleveland, O., served writs of attachment on the Douglass Furnace company, of Sharpsville, foreclosing a judgment of $105,000 in favor of Corrigan, Ives & Co., of Cleveland; an attachment issued by the Croton Line company, limited, to the amount of $1,500; one issued by the Exchange National bank, of Chicago, for $25,000, by the Wisconsin Marine and Fire Insurance company bank for $125,000. This aggregates $300,500. The failure is perhaps directly attributable to the recent assignment of Forsythe, Hyde & Co., of Chicago, by which the furnace has been operated.

Close of the State Saengerfest.

WILKESBARRE, July 20.—The state Saengerfest wound up yesterday with a monster picnic at Mountain park, at which 5,000 people attended. The prize winners at Tuesday's competitive singing were also announced. First prize was given to the Williamsport Gesang Verein, second prize to the Scranton Liderkranz and the third prize to the Scranton Saengerrunde. The Liderkranz society refused to accept second prize, as they thought they deserved first place. The Scranton Saengerrunde also refused third prize. Musical critics all conceded that the Reading Maennerchor should have been given either first or second prize.

Cumberland Sunday School Workers.

CARLISLE, July 20.—Hundreds of active Sunday school workers were in attendance at Williams' Grove yesterday, this being the second day's session of the Cumberland Valley Sabbath School assembly. The exercises began at 8 o'clock with devotional exercises. Then came "Bible Normal Section," by W. W. White, Ph. D., of Xenia, O., followed by "Primary Practical Instructions," by Mrs. Florence Parker Paxson, of Philadelphia; "How to Study the Bible," by Rev. Francis Smiley, of Chester, and "Chautauqua Round Table," conducted by George E. Mills, of Carlisle.

Fatal Accident to a Prominent Man.

FRANKLIN, Pa., July 20.—R. L. Cochran, of this city, a wealthy retired banker, was accidentally killed on his farm by the discharge of a rifle he was carrying. It was at first reported that he had committed suicide, but the evidence produced before the coroner's jury tended to show that his death was the result of an accident. Mr. Cochran some years ago retired from business, and has since devoted his time to agriculture, and became prominent in the councils of the Farmers' Alliance. For years he edited the Venango Spectator and served as prothonotary.

Railroad Improvements Suspended.

LANCASTER, July 20.—Orders issued from Pennsylvania railroad headquarters to Assistant Engineer Pritchett, who is in charge of the extensive improvements on the line between Philadelphia and Harrisburg, resulted in the suspension of all work, except at Mountville. This action was entirely unexpected by the contractors, who have been given no reason for the suspension. A thousand men are thus thrown out of employment, most of them being Italians.

Feeding Wheat to Cattle.

READING, July 20.—On account of the low price of grain and export demand for hay, many Berks county farmers will feed their wheat to their cattle and poultry. They say it does not pay to sell wheat at 60 cents per bushel, or one cent per pound, and buy bran for the cattle and pay $1 per 100 pounds, or the same price. They claim that they can realize more from the wheat by feeding it.

Railroad Hands Want Their Pay.

ST. PETER'S, July 20.—The employes of the Delaware River and Lancaster railroad, running from this place to Phœnixville, have not received any pay for nearly three months, and notice was given the company that unless settlement in full is made at once no trains will be run.

Thought Her Husband a Burglar.

LEBANON, July 20.—Mrs. Charles Hussey thought she heard a burglar ascending the stairway leading to her room, and, being of a nervous disposition, she jumped from the second story window to the sidewalk, sustaining severe injuries. Instead of a burglar, it was her husband.

Grand Lodge of Good Templars.

WEST CHESTER, July 20.—The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, Independent Order of Good Templars, closed its annual session here yesterday. It will meet next year at Phillipsburg, Pa. Hon. T. K. Stubbs, of Oxford, Pa., was elected grand chief Templar of the state.

A Boy Trifles with Dynamite.

LANCASTER, July 20.—Emanuel, a young son of John Kurtz, of Columbia, found a dynamite cartridge and exploded it in his father's yard. Part of the boy's hand was torn off, and he was otherwise badly injured. His sister was severely injured on the head by a flying stone.

Fish in Reading Water Mains.

READING, July 20.—The water pipes of this city are reported by the drivers of the sprinkling carts to contain many dead fish. When they open the plugs to fill their tanks bass and catfish are thrown out, and the water in some sections of the city is murky, yellow and green.

Two New Charters.

HARRISBURG, July 20.—The United States Radiator company, of Westmoreland county, capital $50,000, and the Pennsylvania Traction company, of Lancaster, capital $10,000, were yesterday chartered here.

For the Columbia Peace Plow.

TROY, N. Y., July 20.—The Columbia Liberty Bell committee have sent forward from this city all of the swords, guns, chains and fillings that they have received that could not be fused into the Columbia Liberty Bell or availed of in the clapper to Messrs. Deere & Co., plow manufacturers, Moline, Ills., who have volunteered to make the Columbian peace plow without cost to the committee. The committee now desire wood of historical interest for the wood part of the plow.

Another Allegation Against Meyer.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The picture of Dr. Henry C. W. Meyer, published in the papers, recalls to Julius Dahlmann, a storekeeper, the face of a man he met in Denver in 1887, and who was introduced to him as Dr. Mayer. Dahlmann says Mayer was intimate with a drug clerk named Klotz while there, and that the latter died under suspicious circumstances. Klotz was insured for $1,000, and Dahlmann, in view of Mayer's career, believes he profited to that extent by Klotz's death.

ENTOMOLOGY AS A CAREER

The Study of Insects Is Becoming a Very Important Business.

Economic entomology is that branch of the science which, looking beyond the mere collection and classification of insects, has to do with the control of those which injuriously affect agricultural products. Its importance is shown by the fact that its bibliography fills a volume of four hundred and fifty pages, while the Association of Economic Entomologists number some sixty active members. That the achievements of its students or professors are remarkable is shown by the statement made in a recent address by the dominion entomologist of Canada that a saving of four hundred thousand dollars' worth of agricultural products was made in North Dakota and Minnesota during 1891 by the adoption of certain measures recommended to farmers by official entomologists.

Entomology as a hobby is now widely pursued by young people and no department of natural history is more attractive, says the Youth's Companion. But the biologic study of insects, though of the first importance to the economic entomologist, is to him only the first step.

The life history of a given pest known, he aims to devise some means to control it. Some of the achievements in this line are, in a general way, well known.

The Colorado potato-beetle is practically under the thumb of paris green. The codling-moth, whose larva infests our apples, is readily controlled by spraying the trees with the same poison at the proper season. So with many other pests of the farmer and fruit-grower. But, as Prof. Riley estimates that one-tenth of our agricultural products is annually ruined by insects, it is evident that plenty of work remains to be done in this direction.

The total annual loss from insects in the United States is placed by the best entomological authorities at about $280,000,000. As the entomologists of the various state agricultural experiment stations and of the national department of agriculture pursue their investigations further this enormous loss will be greatly reduced.

When their labors become better known and appreciated their opportunities for work, as well as the means at their disposal, will be increased. Many more hands and brains will be needed to do the work and young men and women trained in entomology will be called for as assistants.

Most of the states have now established agricultural experiment stations and at the majority of these an entomologist is busily at work on his specialty. Some of the agricultural colleges give courses in economic entomology, and as the farmers learn to better appreciate its money value to them they will devote more and more time to its study.

The implements needed for the collection and study of insects are few and inexpensive.

Grand Display of

FINE DRESS GOODS

DRESS GOODS is such a bewildering topic that we will not attempt a full description, but give a partial outline, which you can fill in by a personal inspection. There are the plain and changable diagonals; plain, plaid, striped and invisible plaid serges; fancy mixtures in all sorts of odd weaves, dots, threads, cross-threads, hair-lines, lines here and there, many at a glance appearing alike, but upon examination are found entirely different. Our assortment of silks is complete—china silks, china surah, plain surah, bengaline, plain, figured and changeable silks, in all the new shot effects. Full line of fancy braids to match any color of dress goods.

.....In Wraps We find the most stylish and the prevailing mode to be the Cape, in some of its variations, single, double or triple capes. Some are plain, others very highly decorated, with fancy iridescent braid, butterfly colors, or some full arrangement at the neck, so much approved this season by the feminine fancy. To some, coats only are the correct garment. To those we would say coats are equally fashionable and stylish, many of these having capes also attached—sometimes one, two or three, as the taste or inclination of the wearer may desire.

We have this season, for the first time, added a Millinery Department, and have spared neither trouble nor expense to make it a success. The result exceeds our most sanguine expectations. This department will be under the same management and conducted on the same principles that have always characterized our entire business. We shall keep everything in trimmed and untrimmed hats, novelties of every description. Having secured a trimmer noted for her artistic and skillful work, we are enabled to suit all tastes. We invite a careful inspection of our entire store. All welcome.
