To Improve Our Consular Service. The consular service should be made more homogeneous. As at present constituted there is no general supervision over the different consulates in the several countries. They should all be made subservient to the consul general, or, even bet-ter, as in the Kaglish service, to the minister accredited to the country in which they are located. As it is, some consuls report to the legation, some to the consul general and others direct to the department of state. It is recognized that this custom arose partly to procure quicker mall facili-tics, but in many instances postal service has been improved lately, and the cable and telegraph can be used for emergencies. The consuls general could be dispensed with, or if retained should pay annual visits to the different posts in their districts, a duty at present only permitted in some countries once a year and by special permission on application to the department. A novel feature might be substituted to in-prease the efficiency of the consular service in the institution of several superintend-ents, whose duty it would be to visit the various consulates and inform the department in relation to their true state, such as the proper location of the office, the state of the records, the correctness of accounts, as well as to ferret out abuses and inquire into any charge of misconduct, all of which can only be done by personal inspection. Owing to their remoteness consuls are less under the eye of the appointing power and the espionage of the public press than any class of public officials.—North American Review.

Enting Loudon Sandwiches.

Among the crowd of us who rushed into Among the reireshment rooms of the London and Northeastern line, where we had to wait for an hour, was a chap who had made up his mind to say something unpleasant when he came to pay for his refreshments. How the Forgetmenot Was Named.

What

Everybody knows the pretty little forget-menot and likes the flower more perhaps because of its name than its beauty. How was it so called? The Germans account for it by quite a pathetic romance. It seems that once upon a time a knight and a lady were walking by the bank of the Danube when the latter asked her "gallast gay" to pluck for her a tiny blue flower which she saw growing in the stream. No sooner said than does, but the knight, overbalancing, fell into the river, and owing to the slip pery nature of the bank and the weight of his own armor was carried away by the current. As he threw the flowers ashore current. As he threw the nowers ashore to his lady he cried out with his last breath, "Vergies mein nicht!" ("Forgetme-not!") And ever since the flower has been looked on as the emblem of fidelity.—Philadelphia Times.

Treatment of Bunions

Bunions are serious and hard to treat. About the only thing to do is to wear seamless stockings, and shoes with kid or fine calf uppers. Avoid heating the feet and change the above frequently. Any sweet oil will heal the soreness of a joint, and sometimes anointing it with fodine will bring relief. When a bunion gets frouble mome, the best plan is to buy a stick of sulphate of copper, pare away the dead skin and canterize the spot. The operation is a trifle painful, but it is only momentary, while the sense of relief that is sure to follow is like the "peace that passeth under-standing."-New York World, shot, and I gave him a large cartridge the gun store man loaded for me with a handful of powder in, and I told Pa it was a goose cartridge, and Pa put it in the gun. The geese came along, about a mile high, squawking, and Pa atmed at a dark cloud and fired. Well, I was offul scared. I thought I had killed him. The gun just rared up and come down on his jaw, shoulder and everywhere, and he went over a log and struck on his shoulder. The gun flew out of his hands, and Pa he laid there on his neck with his feet over the log, and that was the first time he didn't scold me since h got relidgin. I felt offul sorry and got some dirty water in my hat and poured it down his neck and laid him out, and pretty soon he opened his eyes and asked if any of the passengers got ashore alive.

"Then his eye swelled out so it looked like a blue doorknob, and Pa felt of his jaw and asked if the engineer and fireman jumped off or if they went down with the engine. He seemed dazed, and then he saw the gun, and he said take the dam thing away, it is going to kick me again. Then he got his senses and wanted to know if he killed a goose, and I told him no, but he nearly broke one's jaw, and then he said the gun kicked him when it went off, and he haid down, and the gan kept kicking him more than 20 times when he was trying to sleep. He went back to the tavern where we were stopping and wouldn't fouch the gan, but made me ing ft. He told the tovern keeper that he fell over a wire ence, but I think he began to suspect, after he spit the loose teeth out, that the gun was loaded for bear. I suppose he will kill me some day. Don't you think he will?"

"Any coroner's jury would let him off and call it justifiable if he should kill You must be a lunatic. Has your Pa talked much about it since you got back?" asked the grocery man.

"Not much. You see he can't talk much without breaking his jaw. But he was able to throw a chair at me. You see, I thought I would joke him a little, 'cause when anybody feels bad a joke kind of livens 'em up, so we were talking about Pa's liver, and Ma said he memod to be better since his liver had become more active, and I said, 'Pa, when you was a rolling over with the
