TWO LARGE FUNERALS.

Holland and Parfott Buried at Frackville.

MANY IN ATTENDANCE.

The Inquest Was Continued Yesterday and Was Resumed Again To-day—It May Last for Several More Days—Condensed Report of the Testimony.

YESTERDAY the funerals of William Holland and James Parfott, two of the men who met death in the riot at Gilberton on Monday, took place. Holland's remains were taken to St. Mary's church at Mahanoy Plane, at 10 a. m., and were interred in the parish cemetery at Frackville after the celebration of High Mass. The services over the remains of James Parfott were held at 11 o'clock in the Methodist Episcopal church at Gilberton. Rev. A. Richards officiating; and interment was made in the Lutheran cemetery at Frackville. There were large attendances at both funerals, but at no time were there any demonstrations of an unusual character.

Coroner Marshall and his jury proceeded with the inquest in Foley's hotel, Gilberton, at 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

Among the first witnesses was Thomas Fitzpatrick, who testified he heard remarks made about the militia and Homestead. He saw Briggs come out on the car platform and say something about "here we are." At the same time Briggs fired into the crowd.

Councilman Middleton swore the Borough Council's agreement with the Traction company did not give the right of way over that part of the street from which the track was torn up. The company had been notified to remove the track and it was torn up under the direction of the Supervisor.

Robert Painter swore he saw Briggs, Weaver and Amour on the car and each had a gun. He saw Briggs shoot but did not see Weaver do so.

Thomas Rafferty, who is serving as one of the jurors on the inquest, was called as a witness and said he was present when the car arrived, but did not know anyone on it. Heard some one order men out to fix the road and the Chief Burgess said he would arrest anyone who should attempt to do so. Reynolds and Amour then entered into conversation and Amour was about starting back when some one in the crowd said something about the military and Homestead; then one fellow came out and said, "here we are" and at once fired, Rafferty saw Parfott fall and heard him say, "I'm shot." Mahony grasped with a man who had a gun. Briggs only shot once. Other shots were fired. Witness did not see streams in the crowd.

Garrett Keating was the next witness and swore "I saw Amour had a gun; could not say that Benny or Briggs had. Told Amour that it was wrong to bring a force of armed men into the borough, and that he could not lay any tracks that night. Amour said he would get out of the borough. He shook hands with me and Reynolds. I then left and Reynolds went home. Thought everything was settled. I heard shooting and went out. Saw men shooting out of car. Saw Amour in car after the fuss was over. He said he was shot in the lung."

The only other important witness of the day was Daniel Reardon. He arrived at Gilberton on the car that followed the dinky. He rode part of the way on the dinky and thought Amour was loading guns. When he thought the dinky was about to return he got on. Some one fired a shot and Reardon saw a man fall, but could not recognize him. Reardon was scared, hurried away from the place and ran down the railroad. Near McCarthy's breaker he was overtaken by a man who had a National Guard rifle. The man said Amour had requested him to go with him to protect the company's property. Man was excited and said he did not shoot. Said he lived in Girardville.

District Attorney Ryan has begun search in and about Shenandoah for witnesses. Last night he called upon Amour, but the latter's condition was such that the doctor's said an examination might have a bad effect. Before leaving the town Mr. Ryan subpoenaed David Williams, of Jardin street, to appear as witness before the Coroner's Jury to-day. Williams accompanied Amour on the trip to Gilberton.

GOOD NEWS.

The P. & E. C. & I. Company has Started Making Payments.

Special to EVENING HERALD.
POTTSVILLE, Aug. 23.—The Reading Company is rapidly recovering from its financial embarrassments and the employees in the anthracite coal region are beginning to receive their pay.

Paymaster Jones has arranged for commencing the payment of wages for the last half of July.

To-day he paid at the following collieries: Mahanoy City, North Mahanoy, Elmwood, Schuylkill, Tunnel Ridge and Mahanoy Jig House.

After to-day daily disbursement at the different collieries will be made until the wages for the last half of July have all been distributed.

This will serve to brighten up every branch of business north of the mountain.

THE P. O. S. OF A

The State Camp Concludes Its Business at Chester.

The state camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, ended its convention at Chester yesterday. A grand parade, in which 2,000 members of the order participated was held last evening.

There was a hot fight to fix the next place for the convention, Wilkes-Barre, Erie, Altoona, Emporium, Maunynuk and Allentown being mentioned. Erie was finally decided upon for the fourth Tuesday in August, 1894.

According to the change made at yesterday's session, each camp will only be allowed one delegate for every 100. Camps not having a membership of 100 will be entitled to one delegate. Another important change made was that the Recording Secretaries of subordinate camps will not hereafter be required to give an itemized statement of the camp property, but will make their report as a whole.

The report of the Committee on Appropriations, of which ex-State President Spiese was Chairman, provided for the curtailing of the appropriations, which means a great saving to the order and met the views of the entire convention. The matter of leaving the $5,000 of the state camp's money in the bank without drawing interest caused considerable discussion, but it was finally decided to have the trustees put it out at interest. After the convention had fixed the per capita tax at 10 cents per member, Brother Badger tried to get 5 cents extra added for organization purposes, but it was defeated by a strong opposition.

Among the delegates elected to the National Convention which meets in Chicago, were the following Schuylkill countians: Wash Orme, Camp 75; E. H. Koch, Camp 14; S. A. Loch, Camp 74; G. S. Manrer, Camp 989; Daniel S. Shepp, Camp 526; Charles H. Stoen, Camp 48; F. P. Spiese, Camp 57; George F. Dengler, Camp 47; Al. Lauenstein, Camp 81; W. Ramsey Potts, Camp 590.

To-day the home team went to Mahanoy City. A number of its admirers went over to see the game.

To-morrow the Shenandoah and Pottsville clubs will meet on the latter's grounds. It is hoped the county seat players will not break this game up in a wrangle and that the result will show fair play on both sides.

Shenandoah's saucy aggregation will play Pottsville at Dolan's Park to-morrow afternoon. Rees and McCue, of Lansford, will play with Putsville and Reilly and Dewald, his old position, and McCue will go to centre, where he usually plays. Some of the young men at the bridge works are betting that Shenandoah will win. We have been asked to publish this matter so as to show the shaky feeling that exists since Wednesday's game. There never was and never will be an umpire who will suit both sides.—Mirror's Journal.

The Carter Medicine Company Gains an Injunction Against Substitutions.

In the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division Royal Courts of Justice, Saturday, Aug. 23, 1893. Before Mr. Justice Romer. The Carter Medicine Company vs. Knight.

A pharmaceutical chemist at Bath, Somersetshire, England, named Joseph Knight, has had an injunction made against him restraining him from selling any "Little Liver Pills" not made by them. The evidence adduced, satisfied the Judge that in one case he had endeavored to pass off as Carter's pills he had bought from a London wholesale house.

ONE'S OBSERVATIONS.

What He Sees and Hears During His Travels.

While riding to town from Girardville on an electric car a few evenings since I overheard the following conversation between two gentlemen who appeared to be drummers: "You know the flimflam game?" "Yes, of course, I know what it is, but I can't say that I have ever had any practical experience of it. It is the trick of the man who wants to get a bill changed, and, when he has got the change, hastily slips some of it out of sight, and then asserts that the person who changed the bill did not give him the right amount. A mighty mean trick I always regarded it."

"Well, I have have had some practical experience of it."

"You don't mean to say that you have been a victim?"

"No. On the other hand, I have practised the game. When I got on the electric car at Shenandoah this afternoon I handed the conductor a ten-cent piece and got a 5-cent piece in change. After I had traveled some distance the conductor came to me and said, 'Mister, I don't like that dime you gave me, and I wish you would take it back.'

"I took the piece in my hand and took a look at it. Then I put my hand in my pocket, drew out a 5-cent piece and handed it over to the conductor. I noticed that he looked at me rather queerly and did not appear to be altogether clear in his mind regarding the transaction. But he said nothing. After I got out of the car at Girardville the transaction occurred to me that I should have given him 10 cents instead of 5, but at the moment it seemed as if I had done the right thing. Of course, if he had told me, I should have made it right on the spot. As it is, I have got to go out of my way some time in the next few days in order to find that conductor and reimburse him for the 5 cents out of which I cheated him by what I cannot help regarding as the purest flimflam, although, of course, it was wholly unintentional on my part."

At McElhenry's cafe last evening I met the same two drummers. They were relating their recent experience in the matter of lunches to the considerable amusement of their friends who were listening. They may be called Smith and Jones, though those were not their real names. "Yes," said Smith, in answer to a complimentary remark from Jones, "I am looking well, but no better than I feel. Fact is, I have got on to the secret of good health. Stumbled on it by accident. What is it? Oh, just a little matter of lunch, that's all. You may laugh, but it is so all the same. You see, it was this way. A few months ago I decided that the elaborate lunches I was eating were bad for me. So I determined to go back to bread and milk, on which I had thriven when a boy. I did so but somehow or other the thing didn't work right. Instead of feeling better, I kept feeling worse; but I thought it was because my system had become vitiated with French cookery, and so I persevered. It was no go, however, and at last I became convinced that bread and milk was simply a slow poison to me. At this stage I stumbled one day into an English chop-house, and a longing came over me to have a chop and a bottle of bitter ale. I did so, and I felt better than I had for months. I had the same thing next day, and felt still better.

I kept on with the same kind of lunch, changing off to a sandwich, a kidney, a grilled bone, a soup or a salad, but always avoiding milk and the compounds thereof, and sticking to the bitter ale. The result is that I was never healthier in my life. What do you think of that?" "Well," said Jones, "I don't think much of it. My experience knocks your theory into a cocked hat. I, too, was feeling a little out of sorts a few months ago. Like you, also, I had been eating elaborate lunches; and as I had heard a great deal about English chop-houses, I determined to try one. I did so, and had a lunch just like what you have described for several weeks. But to use your language, it was no go; and at last I became convinced that chops and bitter ale were simply slow poisons to me. At this point I stumbled one day into a dairy lunch place; and a longing came over me to have a bowl of bread and milk. I did so, and I felt better than I had for months. Since then I have stuck faithfully to a lunch of bread and milk, avoiding all English chop-houses and their deadly contents. And the result is that I was never healthier in my life. Now, then, I ask you, what do you think of that?" "I think," said Smith, "that you must have struck a terribly bad chop-house." "Well," retorted Jones, "it couldn't have been anything like as bad as the bread and milk you have struck." And then they argued out the question in all its bearings for about an hour, without coming to any agreement. Smith still says bitter ale is the nectar of the gods.

Amour Improving.
Richard Amour, one of the Gilberton riot victims, was called upon by a reporter at his residence on West street to-day and found improving. The attendants said he appeared much better than at any time since Tuesday. He complains of a constant severe pain just below the right shoulder blade and his hearing and sight are somewhat impaired, but the latter is attributed to the effects of the quinine, which is given him to allay plearisy.

A FRIENDLY CRIME.

Was William Evans Crazy or Vindictive.

RESORTED TO DYNAMITE.

He Tried to Blow up His Home While His Wife and Four Children Were Asleep. Prompt Action by Firemen Saved the Lives.

GIRARDVILLE furnished the second sensation of the week and this time it is an explosion of dynamite which placed five lives almost in the jaws of death. The man who brought about the explosion is William Evans, a resident of Girardville, and having a wife and four small children dependent on him for support. He was taken to the Pottsville jail yesterday.

Evans has not been working much for some time past and he had become indebted to his landlord for eight months rent. The latter had given notice that the premises would have to be vacated yesterday, and it is supposed that the threatened eviction temporarily unbalanced his mind.

At about half past eleven o'clock Wednesday night Evans left his house after his wife and children had gone to bed and a short time after there was a tremendous explosion in front of the house. The report was a frightful one and it startled the people in all parts of the town. Evans had exploded a quantity of dynamite on the front porch of his home and then hurried to the mountain.

Fortunately some members of the volunteer hose company happened to be on the streets at the time and it did not take them long to locate the scene of trouble and get to it. When they arrived they found the front part of the house had been badly shattered and was beginning to burn. The screams of the unfortunate wife and her children were heard inside. The firemen effected an entrance and rescued the family. Mrs. Evans and the children were almost suffocated.

After rescuing the family the firemen turned their attention to the flames and they succeeded in saving the building.

One of the firemen tells a pathetic story. As he entered a room the three-year-old boy was attacked by renewed fright by the appearance of the man and crouching in a corner of its crib cried, "O, pop, don't beat me!" The fireman gently picked the frightened child up and hurried with it to a place of safety.

Several men started on a hunt for Evans and carefully searched all the surrounding hills, but did not get trace of him until yesterday morning, when he was caught by a constable while trying to sneak back to the house. Evans was committed without bail.

A common cold should not be neglected. Down's Elixir will cure it.

Broke His Arm.
William Delaney, 11 years old, fell from a bridge at the west end of Coal street last evening and broke his right arm, below the elbow. The boy, who is employed as messenger in the telegraph office, crossed the bridge on his way home to Brownsville and as an electric car approached he hurried to one side to get out of its way. Before he could recover himself he fell from the bridge.
