OUR CHAMPIONS WIN

Defeated the Strong Scranton Team.

AN EXCITING CONTEST

A Large Crowd Witnessed the Game at the Trotting Park Yesterday Afternoon, and Saw the Home Team Take a Ball From the State League's.

The most interesting and exciting game played at the Trotting park was witnessed by a very large crowd yesterday afternoon. The contest was between the strong Scranton team of the State League and our champions. When the last man was put out in the ninth inning the score showed seven runs to the home team's credit, while Scranton was presented with five through errors of the home players. Patches and Bradley are the only ones not credited with making an error.

Outside of the first and second innings, the game put up by the champions of the county was hard to beat. In fact, it was equal to the performance of the State League teams. It has often been claimed by patrons of the park that the home team was equal, if not superior, to a majority of the clubs in that league, and the result of yesterday's contest adds greatly to that belief. Reading played a ten-inning game here, and it was mainly through their good luck that they won.

Messitt, as usual, played an excellent game behind the bat. He caught two men napping at first. His throwing to bases was very accurate, and he is also credited with two hits, one a two-bagger.

Herring the first and second innings, the home team played excellent ball, with a snap and vim that was pleasant to witness. One of the features was two double plays participated in by Martin, Henry and Shaffer.

Both Setley and Bradley put up their usual good game. The latter got one fly in left field, while Setley captured two and made several good steps of ground balls. He, however, dropped a fly on which he had to run a considerable distance.

Shaffer appeared to have an off day, although he redeemed himself by capturing several badly thrown balls.

Shenandoah scored two runs in the first inning. Fulmer was the first man to face Flaigan, and he struck out. Martin followed with a hit to short stop and was retired at first base. Then Toman stepped to the plate and knocked out a three-bagger hit. Patches was heartily applauded when he faced the twirler for the Scrantonians, and the audience had great faith in his ability to bring the runner in. The second ball pitched he lined out to deep right field for a home run, bringing in Toman ahead of him.

The "rooters" for the home team began to feel very comfortable until Scranton's half of the inning resulted in three unearned runs. They should have been retired without a single run. The first man up was Hess. He hit to Toman, who threw the runner out at first. Hogan bunted the ball and reached first base. He was advanced to second by Plets taking his base on balls. On Leidy's hit Hogan scored the first run. In trying to head off Plets at third base Shaffer threw wild, letting in the two runs. Tighe went out on fly to Bradley, and Fritz succumbed to Setley's curves by striking out.

The next inning was a short one. Messitt went out at first, and Henry and Bradley each failed to connect with the ball.

In Scranton's half Moran reached first base on an error by Toman. Zecher was the next man up. Setley had pitched one ball when Manager Bradigan called to him from the players' bench to leave the box and go to left field, Bradley taking his place. This action was severely criticized by many upon the grand stand, and when Setley came from the field at the end of the inning he was heartily cheered. Setley was certainly pitching good ball up to this time, and it was no fault of his that the runs were scored, all of them being unearned. He struck out one man, and the opposing batters had only one hit off him. The management no doubt thought he was weakening, but many questioned the wisdom of the change.

On Flaigan's out from Toman to Shaffer Moran scored the fourth run for Scranton. That was the last run scored by the visitors until the eighth inning, when they added one more to their tally.

In the sixth Patches brought in the third run for Shenandoah on Messitt's two-bagger, and the following inning they took the lead by two more runs. In the last inning, the most exciting of all, Henry got his base by a muff by Fritz of a third strike. Bradley attempted to bunt the ball and as a result sent a daisy between first and second. Leidy made one of the best plays of the game, in retiring Fulmer by a running fly catch. Martin's out at first brought in Henry, and Bradley subsequently scored the last run on an error of Moran's by dropping a thrown ball from the catcher.

In Scranton's last inning they went out in short order. The score:

Made His Will.

Justice William Amour, of Mt. Carmel, was in town yesterday visiting his brother, County Detective Richard Amour, and it is understood the latter caused his will to be prepared. The latter is in a critical condition and members of the family now seem to fear that the bullet wound in the chest will result fatally. Amour is exceedingly weak and suffers from want of sleep. The doctors have decided not to administer any more drugs to produce sleep and he cannot secure natural rest. His right lung is completely clogged by congealed blood and all respiration is dependent upon the left lung. On the whole the victim's condition is much worse than it has been at any time since the first few days.

A Fine Team.

Samuel Darr, the horse jockey, brought a fine team of iron gray horses to town Saturday for the Rescue Hook & Ladder Company. They are greatly admired, and were given a trial in the truck Saturday evening. They will be more thoroughly tested to day with the sprinkler and coal wagon, and this evening they will again be hitched to the truck. So far they seem to be satisfactory.

A High Flyer.

Saturday afternoon "Bob" Hagenbach finished the gliding of the new cross which was recently placed on one of the steeples of St. George's Lithuanian church on South Jardin street, and celebrated the completion of the work by flying an elaborately decorated kite from the highest point of the scaffolding, 150 feet above the pavement.

PERSONAL.

W. J. Watkins spent Sunday at Mt. Carmel; William Siscock went to Pottsville this morning.

P. J. Golden and wife spent Sunday with relatives at Locust Gap.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hoopes, of Delano, spent yesterday in town with friends.

Hon. D. D. Phillips and wife, of Gordon, visited friends in town yesterday.

Miss Inspector Brennan, of Shamokin, passed through town this morning.

Merchant S. L. Price, of Ashland, was the guest of J. J. Price, of town, yesterday.

Miss Foreman James Heaton spent Saturday evening with friends in Mt. Carmel.

Postmaster Graeber, of Ashland, paid a friendly call on Postmaster Boyer yesterday.

Mrs. Dr. Price, of Port Carbon, and Miss Kate Lurwick, of Philadelphia, spent Sunday with Mrs. Charles Gibson.

Jacob Shelly, an old and respected resident of town, is lying dangerously ill at the home of his son-in-law, Evan J. Davies.

Councilman Holman received a dispatch from Hasleton this morning announcing the death of his cousin, Samuel Simmons.

George B. Snyder, of Philadelphia, an old Schuylkill county printer, was the guest of his brother-in-law, J. F. Finney, over Saturday.

H. E. Deugler, assistant postmaster, has taken a vacation and will spend the biggest part of it catching bass in the Susquehanna river, above Pittston.

Henry Argood, of town, has been selected as one of the representatives from this state to the National Camp of the P. O. S. of A., which meets in Chicago next week.

Arnica & Oil Liniment is equally good for man and beast. 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

Base Ball Notes.

He took the stick and gracefully his hand with dust did "wax," And then, poor boy, he got it where The chicken got the axe.

Messitt is hitting the ball of late. Martin covered considerable ground yesterday.

Mahanoy City plays at Pottsville on Wednesday.

It has been suggested that Fulmer play first base.

Ashland is anxious for a game with the home team.

Bradley kept the hits pretty well scattered in yesterday's game.

Pottsville has played seven games away from home and lost them all.

The management is to be congratulated upon their efforts to give Shenandoah a winning team.

It seemed strange that as soon as Bradley went into the box his support was of the gilt-edge order.

A large delegation will go to Pottsville on Saturday to see our champions again down the county seat team.

Pottsville expects to win the next game of the series. Perhaps they may, but Shenandoah will have a say.

Henry, late of the York team, arrived in town this morning and will probably play with the home club. He is a brother of Frank Henry.

SEEKING HIDDEN WEALTH

One of the Notorious Kline Gang Creates a Sensation by Making a Confession in Court and Leads Officers on a Fool's Errand.

The robbery case of Daniel Brennan against Edward Louther and William Zollner was called up at Pottsville on Saturday, and during the proceedings there was developments which led to the hasty postponement of the case until to day, an alleged confession by Louther having led to the belief that he would restore the stolen money. The development amounted to nothing and the trial was resumed to day.

Readers of the HERALD will remember that one night several weeks ago, while Brennan was sitting with friends on the porch in front of his saloon on West Coal street, robbers entered the house from the rear and stole about $2,500 from a bureau drawer. Brennan had received the money on a cancelled loan a few days before. Shortly after the robbery was committed Edward Louther's father made a statement to Justice Cardin which resulted in two arrests—Louther and William Zollner. The former's father found $500 secreted in the cellar of his house, and putting circumstances together that the money was a part of the Brennan robbery and his son was implicated in it, the money was turned over to Justice Cardin.

When Louther appeared in court James M. Cardin, Esq., was appointed to defend him, and after a consultation a plea of guilty was made. The evidence was then submitted by the District Attorney and during its recital Daniel Brennan, the prosecutor, told of the hiring of one Thomas McManus, of a Wilkes-Barre detective agency, to work up the case.

McManus testified that he succeeded in getting himself committed to the county jail and shared a cell with Zollner, who had already been arrested with Louther. Zollner and during one of their conversations Zollner admitted that he helped to commit the robbery. The detective's work was out short a short time after by a prisoner named Mickey Welsh telling Zollner to be on his guard; that his cell mate was a detective.

After the examination of other witnesses Louther was called to the stand for the defense. He soon created a sensation in the court room by making what appeared to be a "clean breast" of everything. He said he committed the robbery and Zollner was innocent. He said some of the unrecovered money was hidden in a dirt bank at West Shenandoah Hillery, and that he was willing to show the place to the officers. Then the case was adjourned.

The story was looked upon as a plausible one, because a few days after the robbery the police learned that three members of the Kline gang had been seen walking from the dirt bank of the colliery and one of them carried a cigar box. Brennan kept his money in a cigar box. It was supposed at the time that the men seen had gone to the dirt bank to divide the money.

Saturday afternoon Louther was brought to town and given an opportunity to confirm his confession. Accompanied by Deputy Sheriff O'Donnell and Chief of Police O'Hara, and followed by several hundred men, women and children, he went to the West Shenandoah colliery. Picks and shovels were taken out to the dirt bank and under Louther's directions men commenced to dig for the hidden wealth, but the digging was fruitless.

Louther pointed out a number of places and the men dug an equal number of deep holes, but the dirt bank failed to give up the gold. After the patience of the officers had been sorely tried, and while the digging was going on fast and furious a smile was detected on Louther's face and the officers concluded that they were being duped. Louther was returned to Pottsville at once and Deputy O'Donnell was one of the most provoked men who ever occupied a seat on a train. The trial was resumed at Pottsville this morning.

Louther was chippy as usual and looked upon the false else he had given the officers as a good joke. He stated before leaving town that he was satisfied; he got an excursion out of it.

This action of Louther's is a sample of his characteristics and those of others in the Kline gang. They are completely devoid of all moral responsibility and are most cunning and desperate. They have figured before the public in criminal acts of almost every nature, but their shrewdness has covered their tracks in almost every case, and they have succeeded in escaping arrest or conviction. Kline and others of the gang have been missing since the Brennan robbery was committed. Kline is supposed to have taken most of the stolen money with him.
