A STABBING AFFRAY

Result of a Midnight Brawl at Girardville.

IT WAS AN UGLY THRUST

Richard Stack Plunges a Knife Into the Breast of William Stanton and Inflicts a Dangerous Wound—The Victim Taken to the Miners' Hospital.

HERE was another stabbing affray at Girardville last night, arising out of a quarrel. The victim was William Stanton. He was stabbed by Richard Stack, Sr. The stabbing was done with a long-bladed pocket knife and the injury was inflicted in the left breast, the blade taking a downward course and penetrating the left lung.

Stanton was carried to his home on Ogden street and was attended by Dr. Forrester, who pronounced the injury a dangerous one, but not necessarily fatal.

The stabbing was the result of a quarrel which was precipitated by an argument between the two men in a Polish saloon.

Stanton was taken to the Miners' Hospital.

OBSE'S OBSERVATIONS.

What He Sees and Hears During His Travels.

On Main street there is a proprietor of a dining room who has a big, warm heart beneath his rough exterior, and late on Saturday night this trait was exhibited. A man whose appearance showed that he was far from being a professional beggar, stopped at the door and looked longingly at the good things spread about. He said not a word, and as the proprietor cast his eyes upon him he walked slowly away. The lunch man followed him, and two minutes later the stranger was sitting at a table partaking of a supper.

"People here in the East are talking about what they term the curse of cheap foreign labor," remarked a man who recently returned from the West, "but if they were in the West, where the Chinese do nearly all this work, they would have some reason to complain. Out there nearly all the work is done by these foreigners on the new railroad lines, and there is no work for the American who is willing to do it. A Chinaman will work all day as hard as a mule for a few cents, and when his task is finished he wants it all in small change. He seems to think that the more pieces he has the richer he becomes, and this money he carries in a belt around his body until it becomes so heavy that he can scarcely move about for the weight. Then he sends it home to China. When one of them dies the others make a rush for the body; it is immediately stripped and a struggle ensues for the coins found in the belt around the body."

Here is another and good story of a funny thing that happened in one of our schools not long ago. The teacher was hearing the spelling and defining lesson, and the word "pedagogue" came up. The boy was called upon to spell it, did so correctly, and then the teacher asked: "What does the word mean, Johnnie?" Johnnie didn't quite know and hesitated. So the teacher to help him, said: "Why, Johnnie, I'm a pedagogue; what does it mean?" And the boy blurted out "old maid," while the teacher put a big black mark opposite his name.

A young lady of this town who was preparing to make a trip to that Mecca of America, Chicago, was advised by her friends who had already been to the Fair, to take with her as little baggage as she could possibly get along with, and that nothing elaborate in the way of dress was wanted. So a week before she had arranged to take the trip, she commenced constructing a list of the things that she needed to take along. On the day before she started, she revised the list, cutting out all the articles that she deemed unnecessary. When her list was finally made, it named thirty-seven different articles, and though her fond father with whom she went, objected strenuously, the thirty-seven articles all went along to Chicago.

Autumn Arbor Day.
In a circular to the superintendents, teachers and officers of the public schools of Pennsylvania, issued by State Superintendent S. S. Shaffer and just received by Superintendent Whitaker the observance of Friday, October 20th, as the autumn arbor day, is urged. It is hardly probable that the local schools will observe the day.

FOOLISH GIRLS.

A Correspondent Makes an Appeal for Their Salvation.

EDITOR HERALD:—I have been impudently and again to call the attention of parents to the conduct of children under age, especially the girls, on our streets, but have held off hoping that those complained of or their parents would have their eyes opened through some other source and realize the real danger which must follow. Finding that matters continue growing worse I have concluded to appeal to those children and their parents through your columns and hope thereby to bring about a reformation to at least some degree. At first when I heard stories concerning these young people I was inclined to attribute them to spite or mischievous acts, but upon giving my personal attention to the matter I found that most all I had heard was only too true, and in some instances the causes for complaint were far worse than had been pictured to me.

It is really deplorable that girls, some as young as 12 and 14 years, should be seen on the streets and alleys at all hours of the night, and frequently during the early morning hours, in the company of questionable young men, and many of these children, infants I may say in some cases, belong to some of our most respected families. Market street, which is between Main and White streets, I find is an especial rendezvous for these thoughtless and foolish girls and they seem to monopolize the situations of drummers and male strangers, who can have nothing but the ruin of the dupes in mind. Could they but see their folly, realize the path which their acts must make for them and appreciate the anguish a discovery of their downward course would bring to their loving parents, they would pause a moment and reflect and a moment's reflection might save them.

How lamentable it is to know that one of our public school teachers was obliged the other day to administer a rebuke to several of her girl scholars who were seen on the mountain in the company with male strangers. And who cannot guess what prompted the recent resolution of the superintendent of our public schools to establish a system by which parents will be enabled to tell whether or not their children have been detained in the schools when they do not reach their homes at the proper time? Every man and woman owe it as a duty to themselves and their families, and to God, to see that this accursed practice of detraction is crushed. It is fast eating away the souls, yes the very life itself of the young people and unless something decisive is done without delay many now innocent girls may get beyond redemption.

The first thing to be done is to administer strict home discipline, compel the children to be within the home circle at reasonable hours and keep them in sight at all times when their absence from the household is necessary, and when they are caught with questionable or strange people under circumstances that betoken evil, upon calm deliberation, administer such rebukes as will seem most in the case. If the parents do not take this matter in hand the White Caps or some other vicious organization will be required to stem the tide.

Dr. Mehrenleider Leaves.

Dr. Albert N. Mehrenleider left town last evening for Boston, Mass., where he intends to locate. The doctor leaves town with the hearty wishes of the community for his success. During his residence here Dr. Mehrenleider made himself very popular with all classes and won the respect of all with whom he came in contact. As a physician he secured the confidence of all his patients, which has repeatedly been evidenced by the testimonials published in the Polish, Lithuanian and English papers circulated in the town, all of which have been unstinted in their praise of the doctor as a practitioner in cases of rheumatism and confinements. There were some confinement cases the doctor had in charge which were of very critical character, but his skill was equal to the emergency and he succeeded in bringing all the patients to a stage of complete recovery. Dr. Mehrenleider was a stranger when he first came here, but he soon confirmed what the New York journals stated of him when he graduated from the University of that city—that he was one of the best graduates of the institution.

THE TELEPHONE SERVICE.

The Long Distance Telephone Line is in Operation.

Mr. George F. Moore, general manager for the Pennsylvania Telephone Company, spent yesterday and to-day in town, with his assistants, putting in the boxes and adjusting the long distance telephone system. This morning he placed a box in the HERALD office and when the connection was made he called up offices at Mahanoy City, Pottsville, Tamaqua, Ashland and Girardville, opened communication direct with Mr. I. J. Lorch, division superintendent of the Pennsylvania Telephone Company at Mauch Chunk, and then called up Mr. P. C. Anthony, the manager of the system at Reading. Members of the HERALD staff were given an opportunity to test the services to all the points, named and they pronounced it a success. There was no delay in securing answers from any of the points and the messages were received in the same clear and well defined tones as that which characterizes ordinary conversation. The long distance service is far superior to the old system in every respect. The method of calling up exchanges is much simplified and the apparatus for transmitting the messages is so much more powerful that they can be taken at the first delivery, thus doing away with the "What's that?" "Repeat that?" of the old system.

A HERALD reporter had a conversation with Mr. Anthony, the Reading manager, in which that gentleman stated that the base ball enthusiasts of Reading wish to send greeting to the Shenandoah cranks, through the HERALD. Mr. Anthony is an ex-base ball manager. He says the Reading club has disbanded, but in case the Shenandoah cranks should wish a game a club can be raised to accommodate them.

"Charley" Hartman, of the Ashland Record, was called up and he sent the following over the wire: "I have just returned from the World's Fair. I had an elegant time. I went over the Nickel Plate, an excellent road. I had no trouble getting passes for the big show. No, Mrs. H. was not with me. (Aside) It was a good thing, though, because I met a 'cousin' of mine. Good bye."

Seligman, of the Pottsville Chronicle, answered with a "Hello" and made this contribution to the opening day collection: "Well, you boys did shut us out badly. Yes, Shenandoah can play ball. It leads in everything and there are no flies on it. The HERALD is all right, too; it will stay at the front. We don't like Sunday base ball, but did you see the crowd we sent up to see the 'slut out'?"

Editor Harris, Tamaqua Courier: "How are you, HERALD? The putting in of the long distance 'phone is an enterprising stroke on your part. The HERALD is always in the lead. I am awfully tired of the newspaper business, because Tamaqua is so dull. There is nothing stirring. Can't get a stick full, still I manage to keep the best paper in Tamaqua going."

Editor Hirt, Tamaqua Recorder: "Harris and me have made up—until the next time. You know I print the best weekly in the town."

"Doc" Wilson, Tower City Echo: "How's the HERALD? I am still echoing the news through Williams Valley. Wish you every success."

Pottsville Republican: "Say, HERALD, I have a bit of ex-cuse—"

At this point somebody else yelled "Tata" and as the Pottsville man and the owner of the unknown voice got into a discussion over eavesdropping the HERALD man retired.

The long distance 'phone is a success.

SCARCITY OF WATER.

The Schuylkill Traction Company Handicapped by It.

All the collieries and other consumers of the Girard Water Company are suffering by reason of a scarcity of water. The storage reservoirs of the company are in a crippled condition and the big reservoir north of Lost Creek is lower than it has been for years.

The collieries supplied from this source are the Hammond, Girard, Preston No. 2, and East, operated by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co., and Packer Nos. 2, 3 and 4, operated by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, and the Wm. Penn, operated by the Pennsylvania Coal Company. Yesterday the officials of these collieries were notified that they could only be supplied with water one hour out of twenty-four and this schedule will be continued until the reservoirs are replenished.

One of the heaviest sufferers from this condition of affairs is the Schuylkill Traction Co. They depend entirely on the Girard Estate for their water supply at the power house at Girardville, and they, too, come in under the one hour in twenty-four rule, and as a consequence are greatly hampered in the running of the system. To-day the cars were run very irregularly, and unless a supply of water can be secured from some other source the road may be forced into a partial, if not general suspension before the week is out.

He Wielded a Knife.
Solly Fredima and John Shuko, two First ward Hungarians, got into an argument and the former brought the wrangle to a close by drawing a knife and taking three slices out of Shuko's scalp. The injuries are not dangerous. Fredima was sent to Pottsville, as he was unable to furnish $500 bail. His brother, John, was also arrested for interfering with Constable Giblin when he made the arrest.

AT THE COUNTY COURT

Arguments on Water Works Cases Postponed.

INJUNCTIONS CONTINUED

The Borough Files Two Bonds of Indemnity in the Aggregate Amount of $150,000—Other Law Suits of Local Interest. Divorce for Brennan.

ATER and other litigations in which Shenandoah people are interested occupied the attention of the court at Pottsville for some time yesterday. The most important of the cases were those of the Girard Estate, the Thomas Coal Company and the Shenandoah Water Company against the Borough of Shenandoah. The arguments on the temporary injunction and rule for an injunction were fixed for yesterday afternoon and representatives of all parties concerned were in attendance before Judges Reitel and Weidman.

Messrs. Schalek and Pomeroy, counsel for the borough, presented a bond in the sum of $100,000 to indemnify the Thomas Coal Company and Girard Estate, and one of $50,000 to indemnify ex-Senator William L. Torbert. Formal objections were made to both, but as S. M. Kereber, Esq., counsel for the Girard Estate, is at the World's Fair, all the proceedings were postponed to the 23rd inst. In the meantime the injunctions stand.

M. M. Darke, Esq., filed his first and final account as administrator of the estate of Mary Welch, deceased, in Mahanoy township. Argument was made on the rule to show cause why the judgment should not be opened and defendant allowed to file a supplemental affidavit of defense in the case of Charles E. Titman against Abernethy.

William Brennan, of town, was deserted by his wife ten years ago. Yesterday the court granted him a divorce.
