BUT GENERAL WALLACE WILL GET WELL PAID FOR HIS NEW NOVEL.

Royalties For Some Famous Novels - Mark Tuain Is a Great Money Maker-Archie Gunter's Stories Sell Well-Howells Not Widely Read,

(Special Correspondence.) Special Correspondence.]

New York, July 25.—General Lew Wallace, the author of "Ben-Hur." has recently been spending some days in New York, being called thither by the suggestion of his publishers, who are about ready to issue his new novel. It is likely that nothing less important than this emer-gency could have called General Wallace to New York, since he is entirely unlike Charles Lumb or Henry Watterson and other distinguished men, who are the most rejoiced when they are able to spend their days amid the pleasures, intellectual and social, of a great city. General Wallace detests cities, and as New York is the largest city he particularly detests that one, not that he does not admire the magnificent evidences of enterprise, nor appreciate the advantages which await those who live in a great city or dwell there temporarily, but he feels choked, crowded, un-comfortal is and restrained the more be cause for many years he has enjoyed the peace, freedom and independence which he as experienced in his country home in Indiana.

General Wallace's new novel has been written with even more painful labor and exacting care than was "Ben-Hur," and it is a much longer story than that, so that it will be published in two volumes. It is more than a dozen years since General Wallace conceived the idea of the story, for he had it in mind vaguely soon after "Ben-Hur" was published, but in the actual work of writing it he has been engaged a little over six years.

This story is bound to be a success pecuniarily, whether it meets the popular favor which "Ben-Hur" did or not. The publishers already have evidences of that, for they have received orders which will make they have received orders which will make it necessary for them to publish an edition of 50,000 copies, the largest first edition of any story ever issued in America, and with the exception of two of George Eliot's stories and one or two of Dickens' the largest edition of any English story ever There is one exception to this statement publisher as well as the author of the sto ries which appear under his name, frequently issued editions of more than 50,000 copies. General Wallace is, if the sales of his works are considered and the profits therefrom, the most successful of living authors with the single exception of Harrist Beecher Stowe. One of the partners in his publishing house said recently that the ac counts had been written up of the sales of "Ben-Hur" and the royalties paid and due, and it was found that General Wallace had earned in royalties from that single book something over $100.000. The book has sold over 600,000 copies, and no American novel excepting "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has equaled that sale.

If Mrs. Stowe had received all that she ought to have been paid in the way of royalties for "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the work would have netted her over $1,000,000. But when the novel was published she not only had no idea that it had any dramatic possibilities, but as she was at that time no great friend of the drama she probably would have paid no attention to such suc gestion had it been made to her. Therefore the dramatic rights in the story were no secured to her by copyright. Had they been, her royalties would have probably than there had been for some weeks past.

The first roll calls showed the presence of fifty-four sensters, the second of fifty-one and the third of fifty-two. The fifth call showed the pressure of fifty against the favorite drama. Many the favorite drama, Many the favorite drama, Many the favorite drama, for the favo parts of the country to this day it remains the favorite drama. Many persons go to see that who would not witness any other amount of royalties he has received from his works. "His Innocents Abroad" netted him considerably more than $100,000. That, however, was sold by subscription. His story of "The Gilded Age" brought in some $14,000, and then the sale of it stopped as suddenly as though the plates of it had been destroyed, but he received in royalties Miss Alcott probably comes next to these three in the amount of earnings she re-
