THE FIGURES.

The most authentic World figures place the profits on both sides. concessionaires and management, at $4,000,000 each. The total paid admissions have reached nearly 20,000,-000, and, having the receipts of nearly a week to be added, will be likely to reach 21,000,000, which puts the attendance of all other world's expositions so clearly in the shade that they can hardly bear mention in connection with the subject. This, says the Laneaster Examiner, is gratifying to our national pride, and is not without its benefit in showing that we are really great and that the mass of the people are well to do, else such an enormous mass of visitors, traveling long distances, could not have attended.

It may be that thousands are feeling the pressure of the expense, but it will not do to take a dellar and a rear view of the nation even if the times are hard. We can not have both tart and "penny," as the boy wished. The indirect and unseem benefits of the fair are consurable. The educational value of the exhibit and the pitional entertainment afforded out not be gauged by a golden yard silek. It was the whole government in miniature. Nearly all in affendance were Americans, with every state a special building. But over all was the dome of the capitol, and, floating from every point, the stars of the flag told the world of "one out of many." This coming together of both state pride and central devotion was a lesson in federalism magnificently taught and not soon to be forgotten either by our clyss or the nations at large.

So ar as the latter has been affected, the allost before of the great mir. Is more formulable than a mayy with eannound turrets. The quiet, reserve World's Fair-its wealth, intelligence, feety namines, always subside and non-fient.
